

Stage set for firing-squad execution

Salt Lake City (UPI) — Condemned killer Gary Gilmore Tuesday convinced the Utah Board of Pardons to let him die, setting the stage for his execution by firing squad within a week.

"Thank you, Mr. Latimer," the 35-year-old slayer told board Chairman George Latimer who had announced the 2-1 decision not to commute or delay imposition of the death penalty.

Gilmore was described in "good spirits" after the ruling by his lawyer, who said his client was happy about both the proceedings and the outcome.

The board's two-hour hearing and the announcement of its decision after an hour and 10 minutes of closed door deliberation were broadcast live on both radio and television in Utah.

The board listened to Gilmore argue that his sentence for the slaying of a motel clerk last summer was "proper" and that delays in carrying it out were "much ado about nothing."

"I did not request to die," said the condemned man, who sat at the end of a large table flanked by the three board members. "I simply accepted the sentence of the court. That's not a request to die."

Gilmore was convicted of first degree murder for the execution-style slaying of Bennie Bushnell, 25, of Provo, Utah, during a holdup last summer. He has admitted slaying a young service station attendant the previous night.

Gilmore, who wore prison whites with handcuffs on his wrists and shackles on his ankles, appeared gaunt and nervous but spoke calmly and firmly. He had lost 20 pounds during a 11-day hunger strike.

"I'd like to make it clear I'm not a proponent of capital punishment," he said. "I don't have an opinion one way or another, but I do see the virtue and the logic of the maxim: 'an eye for an eye.'"

"This is my life and my death. I seek nothing from you. I haven't earned anything and I don't deserve anything. I simply accepted the sentence that was given me. I believe the sentence was proper."

The pardons board immediately prepared papers on its decision for transmittal to District Judge J. Robert Bullock in Provo, who must set a new execution date.

Gilmore's lawyer Ronald Stanger and state authorities predicted the execution would be set for next Monday or sooner to avoid possible legal questions over a state law requiring executions within 60 days of sentencing.

In Washington, lawyers for another man sentenced to die next week — Robert Excel White — asked the U.S. Supreme Court to block his scheduled Dec. 10 execution in the Texas electric chair. They acted over the condemned man's objections.

The American Civil Liberties Union said it would file a request for a stay of Gilmore's execution with the high court.

Latimer said he and board member Thomas Harrison voted to allow the execution to go ahead because Utah's death penalty law is constitutional and "no factual issues have been presented to the board that shows any reason for changing the sentence of court."

Board member Harriet Marcus dissented, saying the execution should be delayed until after the Utah Supreme Court rules on the constitutionality of the state's death penalty statute.

Gov. Calvin Rampton, who stayed the execution pending the board's hearing, said he agreed with the ruling. Under state law, the governor cannot take any further action in the case.

Most of the hearing was taken up by opponents of the death penalty who asked the board to delay the execution until after a court ruling on Utah's untested law. The Utah attorney general's office and the Utah County attorney, who prosecuted Gilmore, appeared to support Gilmore's request to die.

Latimer repeatedly told anti-execution witnesses that the only issues before the board were whether Gilmore was properly tried and sentenced and whether his crime deserved the death penalty.

"I'd like them all to butt out," Gilmore said of the protesters. He objected to appearances by an ACLU lawyer, by attorneys representing two other inmates on Utah's death row, and by the two court-appointed lawyers who represented him at his trial and whom he fired when he decided not to appeal.

"The people of Utah want death penalties, but not executions," he complained. "I want the sentence carried out."

In an interview Monday night with the Salt Lake City Tribune, Gilmore — who has spent 18 of the past 21 years in jails — said he doesn't want to spend the next 18 or 20 years behind bars.

"If the board and the courts do not wish to accept the sentence handed down, they should let me go," he said.

"You can't take someone's life or do some wrong and then start to sniffle because you are punished."

Brezhnev extends appeal

Moscow (UPI) — Soviet Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev made a strong personal appeal to President-elect Jimmy Carter Tuesday, saying it was "high time" to put a leash on nuclear weapons and resume U.S.-Soviet trade.

Brezhnev called for "intensive efforts" to rekindle the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks between the two superpowers, which have been going on for four years and stalled for one.

Yet more arms on way

Washington (UPI) — Although the Soviet Union is loading a new series of intercontinental missiles into launchers right now, administration sources said Tuesday that still another generation of more powerful and accurate nuclear weapons is being developed.

The sources cited a "very massive" missile development program as evidence the Soviet Union is working toward strategic superiority over the United States, despite Strategic Arms Limitation agreements.

Send moose homeward

Estherville, Iowa (UPI) — A large bull moose was roaming through parts of northwest Iowa Tuesday, separated from its natural habitat by several hundred miles.

Game Warden Robert Moats said the 1,000-pound moose was spotted behind the Estherville Municipal Power Plant early Tuesday, but took off on its own as conservation officers attempted to track it.

Moats said the moose appeared somewhat disoriented and must have wandered into Iowa from northern Minnesota or southern Canada. He was hopeful it would find its way home, despite the fact the moose was last seen moving in the opposite direction.

Defector asks asylum

Washington (UPI) — Informed Korean sources said Tuesday the second ranking Korean Central Intelligence Agency officer in the United States has requested U.S. political asylum.

The sources identified the defector as Sang Keun Kim, 43, who is officially listed as a counselor with the South Korean Embassy in Washington.

State Department spokesmen declined immediate comment.

Park staying away from U.S.

(c) Washington Star — Tongsun Park, central figure in the federal probe of South Korean influence peddling on Capitol Hill, has decided not to return to this country from England and has begun divesting himself of real estate holdings here, according to associates of the millionaire businessman.

Koreans search own house

Washington (UPI) — South Korea has begun a widespread campaign to suppress and divert investigations into illegal Korean practices in the United States, congressional and emigre sources both said Tuesday.

Train kills 19 on bus

Mexico City (UPI) — A freight train, moving along the tracks without lights in pre-dawn darkness, crashed into a crowded bus at a railway crossing Thursday, killing 19 persons, and injuring 20 others.

The bus driver, 22-year old Cesar Rodriguez Ruiz, said he did not see the oncoming train as he began moving across a railroad crossing because it had no lights.

Even under Hawaii's swaying palms, these Nebraskans' thoughts turned to a football game.

Nebraska neighbors made trip possible

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Kaanapali, Maui, Hawaii — Bill and Alice Byers owe a big "thank you" to their daughter and to their thoughtful neighbors.

"Our daughter, Suzanne and a lot of good neighbors are watching the farm and doing chores for us while we're over here," explained Alice during a bus tour of the island of Maui. "If it wasn't for them, we probably wouldn't be here."

That's where community cooperation reaps dividends in rural Nebraska. The Byers are spending a week in the Hawaiian Islands while their neighbors help out back home near Kearney, about 60 miles north of Lincoln.

The trip, which ends Saturday night after the Nebraska-Hawaii football game in Honolulu, is more than just a time of relaxation and a football game for the Byers. It's actually a 20th wedding anniversary present.

"My wife wanted to come here anyway for our anniversary (Dec. 27)," Bill said. "Then when the game and tour was available we decided to take it. Generally we try to take a vacation once a year, but this is the first time we've been to Hawaii."

The Byers had planned to be with 10 Washington County couples on the tour. But drought conditions and lower-than-expected cattle prices dented that figure to three couples.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Rasmussen of Kearney, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Vogt and Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hilgenkamp of Arlington are the Hawaii visitors "from a whole bunch of us that originally planned to take the trip."

"Most farmers didn't have a good year. It just might take me another 30 years to pay for this trip," Byers kidded.

Byers has farmed about one and one-half miles southwest of Kearney for the past 21 years. He has 405 acres planted with corn and soybeans.

This season, he obtained 60 bushels of corn and 20 of beans. "That's good enough to get me over here," he noted.

Byers attended the University of Nebraska for two years (1946-49). But he has only attended one football game since his college days.

"That was six or seven years ago and I can't even remember who we played or if we won. It's hard for us to get down to Lincoln. I'm looking forward to seeing the game here," he said.

Alice agreed with him on the scenic spots in Maui.

"It's really a beautiful place," she said. "It's lovely and everyone has been so nice. We sure wanted to come here since it's so gorgeous. It seemed funny in a way that when it's 10 below zero back home, we went swimming here."

She said her friends who had planned to accompany them on the Hawaiian tour will undoubtedly be disappointed when they see the pictures taken in the Islands.

"We haven't called Suzanne yet, but we'll probably call her later this week to find out how things are. We'd be staying home if it wasn't for everything everyone has done for us."

Someone said it was supposed to snow 10 inches in Omaha. That's not very far from us," she said. "But I don't think it's going to snow here."

With temperatures constantly between 65 and 80 degrees, chances are quite good the snows won't reach halfway across the Pacific Ocean. But there's nothing like friends in small Nebraska towns to make trips possible.

Assembly suggested for roads dilemmas

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

"I am thoroughly convinced that the right hand doesn't know what the left hand is doing," said Lancaster County Commissioner Robert Colin, as he suggested a mass meeting of politicians and road planners to discuss two particular county road projects.

The two projects — a replacement bridge on Old Cheney Road in Wilderness Park and an east Lincoln corridor study for a north-south controlled-access road — were once a part of the county's one- and six-year road plan proposal.

Last week the commissioners deleted the corridor study and delayed the bridge replacement.

This week the board — minus Jan Gauger — temporarily reneged on that decision until after Colin's suggested meeting.

The issues involve much more than Colin's right and left hand analogy. It is similar to an octopus.

The meeting will include every party with an interest in the road projects; planners, politicians and advisory board members from city, county, state and federal levels.

What the Board wants is some agreement on whether Old Cheney Road will eventually be closed west of 14th St. If it is to be closed, commissioners are unwilling to put in a $225,000 bridge and will instead ask the county engineer to simply renovate the existing bridge.

The road closing decision rests on the future linkage to the West Bypass and the problems of future railroad viaducts over Old Cheney Road.

Colin said information he has received shows that most state and local road people feel that an east Lincoln corridor study should be done, and done by an outside consulting firm with supervision by the county engineering department. But he wants those comments made public.

The board rejected County Engineer Marv Nuernberger's request for extra money to improve the Old Cheney Road bridge and 84th St. during the Tuesday meeting.

And much of the road discussion was a rerun of last week's debate between Nuernberger and Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton.

Nuernberger, who has assurances of federal funding for the bridge replacement, wants to move ahead. Hamilton has made it clear he will not approve the bridge until a decision is made on the future of the road itself.

Nuernberger believes that it is the county's responsibility to coordinate any east Lincoln corridor study and he feels that a controlled-access road is needed as a replacement to the heavily traveled 84th St.

Hamilton isn't convinced that the need for a new road is clear. He wants two questions answered — whether a $15 million road is necessary and whether such a road will spur growth into the Steven's Creek watershed area — before any corridor study is begun.

Both men finally agreed on one point — that they were each getting "a bit redundant."

PSC employees' attire irks commissioners

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Putting Public Service Commission employees on notice Tuesday about the kinds of clothing they wear to work, some commissioners said if the office situation doesn't improve, they'll impose a dress code.

By a bare majority, the PSC approved a motion by Jack Romans of Ord to give each agency employee a copy of the state personnel system handbook section on suggested dress.

Voting in favor were Romans, Chairman Duane Gay of Columbus and James Munnely of Omaha. Eric Rasmussen of Omaha passed on the vote and Robert Marland of Lincoln was absent.

"I don't see the need for it," Rasmussen objected to Romans' suggestion to enter the action in the PSC official minutes. He called it a "trivia thing," saying Commission Secretary Everett Green should handle it administratively by instructing any employees who dress shabbily about apparel expectations.

Green said the handbook states that employees are "expected to maintain a high standard of dress and grooming," and that "clothing worn on the job should be in good taste and reflect requirements of the working conditions."

"That," Munnely quipped, "says something without saying anything."

If, in commissioners' judgment, meeting those standards doesn't work out, "we'll take formal action" to draw up dress guidelines for PSC staff, Gay said. He offered to make just such a motion Tuesday.

Romans brought up the issue because "there has been some comments made from time to time about appearance of staff by people who come to the commission." He said "It would be in line if we had a reasonable dress code for the employees, perhaps both summer and winter."

"It was in summertime that most of the comments was made," Romans said. Gay said "slacks suits" are acceptable dress but "I do not believe those faded jeans are appropriate in an office."

In other business, the PSC approved a Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. application for a new schedule of depreciation rates, providing a composite 5.06% or an increase of $538,306 annually. Present rates produce a composite of 4.73%, based on last year-end equipment in service.

The PSC granted part and denied part of increases in the official household goods tariff sought by the Nebraska Motor Carriers' Association.

Finding that intrastate rates on household goods "are markedly less than interstate rates," the PSC concluded some rate relief is justified. Only part of the boosts requested were allowed in fees for labor (from $6.50 to $7.45 hourly — $8.60 was sought, as an example), overtime (from $8.65 to $10.15 per hour) and slight increases in storage and handling charges. Packing, unpacking, container and hauling charges remain the same as approved this past spring.

Authority to remove tracks was granted the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad at the Havlock 70th Street spur, Lincoln College View spur, Martell, Lincoln live rail track and track scale, and two Albright sites (south Omaha).

Commissioners granted part of increases requested by Curtis Telephone Co. in a proposed new rate schedule, but deferred ruling on three motions by Northwestern Bell of Omaha for PSC reconsideration of three tariff proposals.

The PSC denied a Nebraska Railroads application to increase charges for hauling recyclables, and suspended Nebraska intrastate operations of Dilts Trucking, Crescent, Iowa, for operating beyond the scope of its licensed authority.

Winter due to be coldest in years

Washington (AP) — The U.S. Weather Service has updated its original long-range forecast for the winter, and it still shows that much of the nation is in for the coldest winter in years.

The Southeast, the Ohio Valley, the Southern Great Plains as far west as New Mexico and the Middle Atlantic as far north as New York were all slated for a colder than normal winter in Monday's forecast.

At Christmascens . . .
Radarcast demonstration,
Thurs. Dec. 2, 6-8PM — Adv.

Temperatures above normal are expected for the Dakotas and Wyoming to the Pacific Coast all the way south to Mexico. Elsewhere the chance that temperatures would vary from normal were described as indeterminate.

The latest forecast, which covers December through February, was an update of one initially issued Nov. 10. Although it shows no change, the weather service said the margin of error for the new forecast is smaller because it is based on more recent data.

Both forecasts have contained the summary, "If winter temperatures follow the pattern described, they will have broken away from the pattern of the last five years."

It takes a brave man to pedal a bicycle down Main Street in Buffalo during Tuesday's heavy snowstorm.

14 inches buffaloes Buffalo

United Press International
Highway-clogging snows marooned hundreds of motorists in snowbelt areas of the Northeast Tuesday and slowed the pace of life in Buffalo and other cities along the shores of Lake Erie.
Harsh cold — far in advance of the official start of winter — caused death, suffering and hardships across a vast belt of the Plains, Midwest, South and East.
With no real signs of relief from the wintry onslaught, the death toll from the weather mounted.
A Davenport, Iowa, man apparently fell asleep in a lumber yard and froze to death in zero temperatures. An 11-year-old boy missing since Saturday was found frozen to death a block from his home in Columbus, Ohio.

Louisiana counted two hunters dead in the storm that swept across the South before it belted the East. One froze to death in his duck blind. The other apparently died of exposure after becoming separated from his hunting companions.
An Indiana motorist was missing and presumed drowned in the Ohio River after his car skidded on ice and went out of control on the George Rogers Clark Bridge at Louisville, Ky. Police believed he was thrown into the river when the automobile rammed into the span.

Some 500 stranded motorists were sheltered overnight at schools in Chautauqua County in northwestern New York State, after up to two feet of snow fell in less than six hours. Hundreds of others were stranded along Interstate 90 in Erie County, Pa.
The New York State Thruway was closed for hours from Hamburg, N.Y., to the Pennsylvania border. Skyway Bridge along Lake Erie in Buffalo and the Greater Buffalo International Airport also were closed.

Fourteen inches of snow fell in the Buffalo area and was heaped into drifts by 20 m.p.h. winds. Seventeen inches of snow piled on Erie, Pa. Northeast Ohio communities got up to 11 inches. Drifting snow hobbled traffic on Interstates 190 and 98 near Grand Rapids, Mich.
All Buffalo city schools, most suburban Buffalo schools and many in northwest Pennsylvania were closed. Classes were canceled at Canisius and Buffalo State Colleges.
The storm forced cancellation of a YWCA cross-country ski clinic in Buffalo.

Thousands of recruits had to use extra blankets and electrical heaters to keep warm after a power plant fire hit Great Lakes Naval Training Center Monday night. A Veterans Administration hospital which gets heat from the plant transferred nearly 800 patients to other hospitals.
The nation's low was 23 below zero at Hibbing, Minn., where the cold is an accepted fact of life. Harder to take were the record and near record temperatures for November recorded at Lake Charles, La., with 23 degrees; Meridian, Miss., 16;

Pilot dodges poles

St. Louis (UPI) — Pilot Michael Brewer said he had to "zip around a few telephone poles" to make an emergency landing of his twin-engine plane early Tuesday on a main thoroughfare in suburban Crestwood.
Brewer, of Grand Rapids, Mich., maneuvered the plane about three blocks up a steep hill on old U.S. 66, then stepped out on to the pavement and flagged a motorist whose car was about to crest the hill and head into the propeller of Brewer's Comanche.
The bizarre landing occurred because the gasoline gauge on the plane froze. The gauge showed at least one-quarter of a tank of gas, but Brewer realized the tank had gone dry.
"I had about 80 seconds to pick a spot and land," he said. "I could have tried some wooded areas, but there was no traffic below, so I just zipped around a few telephone wires and poles and used the street. The uphill slope made for a shorter ground roll."
Brewer, a professional pilot for Executive Aviation in Detroit, said, "I didn't even bump my head in the landing. I set the brake on the aircraft and got out. When that first car came up over the hill, I flagged him down and asked him to call the police. He looked somewhat surprised."
A police officer called to the scene admired Brewer's dexterity at the controls. "It's not like he landed in flatland," the officer said. "It's a pretty good grade with light standards, fire plugs, the whole bit. The guy did a super job."
Brewer was flying from Detroit to Weiss airport in suburban Fenton.
"Another cupful of gas and I would have made it," he said.

Seesawers sorely happy

Little Rock (UPI) — Two high school seesawers have climbed off their specially constructed seesaw, their legs wobbly and bodies aching from 17 days of going up and down.
Jeff Craig, 17, and Rick Reeves, 18, students at McClellan High School, ended 408 hours on the seesaw in a shopping center mall.
They dressed in tuxedos and black patent leather shoes at the conclusion of their endurance feat, which they undertook to raise money for their school. They raised $3,500.
"I feel pretty good," Reeves said. "Yeah, we'd do it again... maybe do a few things differently."

She's skating over desert

Linda Reingold worked out recently in Los Angeles.

Death Valley, Calif. (AP) — This desert region has been the scene of a lot of strange behavior over the years. Now, Linda Reingold is trying to make a 125-mile trip across the desert — on roller skates.

Miss Reingold, 28, a landscape designer from Malibu, Calif., began her trip Tuesday from Scotty's Castle, in the northwest corner of the valley. She planned to end the trek by Thursday at Shoshone, on the southeast edge of the area.

Frequently one of the hottest spots in the United States, Death Valley is one of the milder areas during the winter. Highs in the desolate area are averaging in the upper 60s, with lows dipping to about 40 at night.

Miss Reingold said she first thought of the idea while skating door to door in Southern California canvassing for the Jimmy Carter presidential campaign. "I was just kidding around, and I told some friends, 'If Carter gets elected I'll skate Death Valley.' Carter won and they're making me keep my promise."

Miss Reingold's "trainer," Gary Hudson, was accompanying her, also on skates. He claims to be the only person around who plays tennis on roller skates. Other friends were manning a motor home complete with a stereo system to provide skating music.

The two skaters hope to cover about 55 miles a day, with periodic rest stops and overnight camping.

Miss Reingold said she and Hudson trained for more than two weeks to get ready for the trip, eating a special high-protein concoction of fresh fruits, grains and peanut butter and skating for four to five hours a day.

Farm products' prices drop

Washington (UPI) — Prices for raw farm products dropped 3% during the month ending Nov. 15, an indication that retail food prices will be stable through this winter, the Agriculture Department reported Tuesday.

However, the sharpest harvest-season price drop in many years — prices were 6% below 1975 figures — indicates grocery prices will go up in the spring. Officials said this is because farmers are losing money at these prices and will cut back their output.

A comparison of farm prices with the cost of things farmers buy showed farm product values fell from October's "fair earning power" parity standard of 88% to 86% — the lowest level since the spring of 1933. The level was 74% a year ago.

However, some officials consider this an outmoded statistic, pointing out that farm income this year is expected to be about $24 billion, the third best on record.

It was the fourth consecutive drop in the average for raw agricultural commodities and was led by declining prices for grains, due to record wheat and corn crops, and for hogs, cattle and grapefruit. Higher egg and soybean prices partially offset the losses.

A near-record Soviet grain harvest means overseas sales will not be as large as previously expected.

The farm price average is a rough guide to trends in retail food prices, but because it often fluctuates sharply from month to month, it does not always foreshadow immediate price changes, which are affected by other factors including processing costs.

Currently, Agriculture Department experts predict retail food prices will be stable this winter but will rise in the spring.

Carter will be facing economic decisions

By Sam Boyle
Associated Press

President-elect Jimmy Carter is finding that he will have to make critical economic decisions in the early days of his administration.

The Common Market nations agreed Tuesday that they couldn't deal with many of their economic problems until after Carter was inaugurated and the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) decide what they will charge for oil.

On the domestic front, the Labor Department said the job layoff rate in the nation's factories rose in October for the third consecutive month. The department said manufacturers laid off 1.7 workers per 100 employees in October, up from 1.5 in September and 1.3 in August.

There was some good news for consumers, though. The Agriculture Department said the price paid to farmers for raw products dropped 3% from Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, indicating only a moderate rise in the family food bill next year.

More evidence about the state of the economy next year will be released on Wednesday. A government analyst said the Commerce Department's index of leading economic indicators will be neither up nor down for October after two months of decline.

The price of steel was also an issue facing the incoming administration. Carter has expressed concern about price hikes of 6% announced by the nation's steel producers. Carter said it could give the OPEC nations impetus to seek even higher prices than they might have otherwise at their upcoming conference.

The Commerce Department's index of leading indicators is designed to preview the state of the economy by about six months. A flat month after two months of decline can indicate a slowdown in economic growth, economists say.

Whether this will bring Carter closer to a decision on whether the economy requires stimulation through a tax cut or other action remained to be seen.

Another important economic issue that should await Carter is the so-called North-South conference between industrial and developing nations. Common Market leaders decided. They generally agreed at a meeting at The Hague, The Netherlands, that the scheduled Dec. 15 opening of the conference should be postponed until after the price of oil is decided and Carter takes office. Irish Foreign Minister Garrett Fitzgerald told reporters.

"It makes absolutely no sense to push ahead," when U.S. policies may change after Carter takes office on Jan. 20, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said.

Carter discussed one of his own international economic concerns in a speech delivered by telephone to the New Orleans convention of the Southern Seedmen's Association. Carter told the convention that greater farm exports would help the domestic economy and "help insure peaceful relations" with other countries.

He called for an aggressive drive to boost farm exports to build "a good base for permanent peace."

Carter pointed to the government's announcement Monday that the United States imported $4.1 billion more worth of goods than it exported in the first 10 months of the year.

Carter said the deficit, which was $695.9 million in October alone, demonstrates the need for greater coordination among government, business and labor to boost sales overseas.

Carter had said during his campaign that "we should have a program of 'active salesmanship' to promote the sale of American agricultural commodities."

Also on the trade front, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev said trade between the United States and the Soviet Union was in jeopardy unless the United States ended "discriminatory" trade policies that linked trade with political conditions.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, honorary co-chairman of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, said in Moscow that he agreed that trade restrictions against the Soviets should be lifted and called for "strengthening of economic ties."

Carter received a telegram Tuesday from the president of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Co., Thomas C. Graham, who offered to bring an industry delegation to Plains, Ga., to explain recent price increases.

William E. Lilley, acting director of the Council of Wage and Price Stability, said the steelmakers may be forced to call off the price increases — scheduled to go into effect Wednesday because of market pressures.

Carter wants farmers' advice on new agriculture secretary

Plains, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter told a group of seed farmers Tuesday he wants advice from farmers on a new agriculture secretary and that he will name someone with practical farming experience to the post.

And his spokesman said the new administration's top economic posts likely would be filled from among the 16 moderate-to-liberal economists and businessmen attending a conference with him Wednesday.

Carter, in a telephone hookup with the Southern Seedmen's Association meeting in New Orleans, promised to emphasize farm exports, saying American agriculture is one of the nation's best tools of foreign policy. He promised that the Agriculture Department would be included in any discussions involving U.S. trade policy.

Press secretary Jody Powell said the economics conference Wednesday would produce "some if not most of his appointees to economic positions in the federal government."

But Powell said the primary purpose for the meeting is to give Carter an update on the economy, not to look over candidates for office.

The law's wisdom

One can only marvel at the wisdom of the law. Sometimes it seems that the law as embodied in judicial decisions has little to do with common concepts of justice.

In a recent federal court case in Lincoln the judge dismissed a suit filed by a man who claimed he was held at the Lincoln Regional Center for 23 years before being legally committed. He claimed in asking a $2 million judgment that he was transferred from the penal complex to the regional center without being legally committed two days before his sentence would have expired. The state had agreed with the general facts claimed by the man, who was released from the regional center in 1973 at the age of 77.

But the judge said that state officials were immune from liability in such cases unless it can be shown they acted in bad faith. No evidence was presented in the case which proved they had not acted in good faith, he said.

So it would seem that as long as officials act "in good faith," no matter the level of incompetence, they can rob a man of 23 years of his life without the state having to answer for it. Is that justice?

In a Lancaster District Court case, the judge said the new Nebraska medical malpractice case was constitutional and should be implemented forthwith. The state insurance department had refused to enforce the law following a ruling by the State Justice Department that the law appeared to be illegal.

At the heart of the controversy over the new law is a provision limiting a patient's right to receive no more than $500,000 in malpractice claims. The judge said the $500,000 ceiling is reasonable.

Reasonable, perhaps, for the medical profession. But not for the malpractice victim who can prove actual damages exceeding $500,000. Is the law just?

It is probably as easy to second-guess judges and legislators as it is to coach the football team from the stands. A thorough knowledge of the subject and a certain temperament is often lacking in the layman.

But some decisions sure make you wonder.

Flu shots, Dr. Pauling to the contrary

New York—I have not yet taken my swine flu vaccination.

There are a couple of reasons for this—neither of which involve the popular fear, aroused by an abominable series of coincidences, that the vaccine could be more dangerous than the disease.

My reasons for withholding my arm from the injector are these: (1)—the vaccine didn't become available for under-elderlies until a few days ago in our town; and (2)—a public health official told me last July that if Americans didn't get their vaccinations before mid-November, it might be too late. The potential flu season would already have advanced too far for the immunology to take effect.

I'm sure public health would retract that time estimate now, in the hope of seeing through its massive $135 million effort to stave off a possible pandemic such as the one in 1918-19 which killed millions. I can hear a small medico-bureaucratic voice saying "It's never too late to avert disaster—disregard previous warnings."

So undoubtedly this week I shall give in to the better-safe-than-sorry ethic, even though Dr. Linus Pauling, the famous and sometimes controversial author of "Vitamin C and the Common Cold," tells me it is not necessary. According to Dr. Pauling: "It now seems quite unlikely that there will be a swine-flu epidemic; and there is little justification for recommending mass vaccination."

He speculates that the high mortality of the swine flu pandemic of 1918 might have resulted from the malnutrition and other stresses at the end of a long World War I. Quoting scientific studies, he said these factors "caused the virus to be more than usually virulent, and favored the occurrence of secondary bacterial pneumonia."

To back up his theory that a modern epidemic of such virulence is unlikely, Pauling points to the influenza outbreak at Ft. Dix, N.J., which spurred the new fear that swine flu might be devastating.

"In February, 1976, there was an outbreak of influenza in a large military establishment (Ft. Dix). One young serviceman, exhausted by his participation in strenuous exercises, died of pneumonia. Typing of the virus showed that about 500 of the 12,000 persons in the camp had been infected by a swine-influenza virus, given the name A/NJ/76, whereas some others had been infected by another virus, A/Victoria/75, which was then sweeping over the U.S. and Europe

Phyllis Battello

"Although the virus A/NJ/76 seemed to have died out after infecting only 4% of the people in the camp, the resemblance of the virus to that of the 1918-19 pandemic, and the death by pneumonia of one person after a strenuous nighttime military exercise caused fears that another swine-flu epidemic might occur." When the government stepped in with a mass, multi-million-dollar inoculation program, Dr. Pauling clearly implies, it may have been bureaucratic overreaction.

Linus Pauling feels today as he felt six years ago: that a high intake of ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) can prevent the common cold. And he now has test studies which show that it can also protect against influenza. "It is my opinion," he says firmly, "that if ascorbic acid is used in the right way we shall be able to avert epidemics and pandemics of influenza."

He's written a new book, "Vitamin C and the Common Cold and the Flu," which is considerably more broad than his first best seller about the vitamin which captured the public in 1970. Some doctors at that time disputed his theory that C was not only a preventive but a cure for colds—which afflict the average person three times every year. One particular skeptic referred to a study of college students who were given 200 milligrams of C every day, and reported no major difference in frequency or duration of colds from students who were given a placebo daily.

Dr. Pauling, in his new treatise, points out that 200 mgs of C a day are not sufficient. In great detail, and pointing to numerous studies that back up his theories, Pauling says that "the dose taken regularly to preserve good health and provide protection against disease almost certainly should be more than 200 mgs per day for most people. Other considerations lead me to suggest the range of 250 to 4,000 mgs or even 10,000 mg. for recommended daily intake for most people."

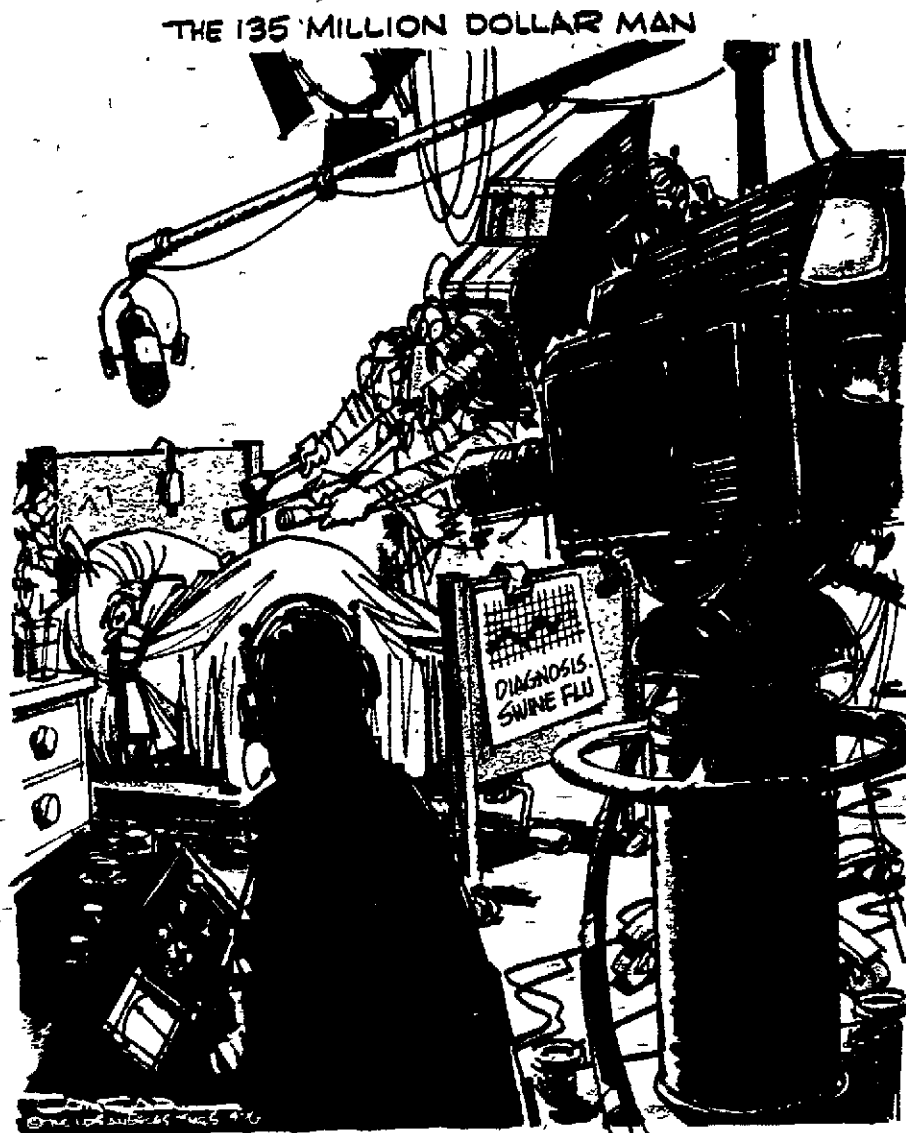

"Such an intake should decrease the chance of contracting the cold or influenza and, in case the viral infection is contracted, should prevent a secondary bacterial infection from developing."

In addition to prophylactic doses of vitamin C, Dr. Pauling suggests that the ultimate goal of preventive medicine should involve a new social attitude among the peoples of the world.

"A person with a cold or the flu should feel he should isolate himself, in order not to spread the virus to others. Social pressure should operate on him."

We have recently experienced a change in feeling about the 'right' of cigarette smokers to pollute the atmosphere and distress non-smokers. A similar change in feeling about the 'right' of a person to spread his viruses and infect others, so long as he himself is able to stagger about, would benefit the world."

Report critical of PSC

A legislative staff report presented last week offered criticism of the way the Nebraska Public Service Commission (PSC) operates and a companion document suggested improvement alternatives.

The PSC's chairman, Duane Gay of Columbus, branded the study as incomplete and unfair, and said the legislative staffers used unrepresentative cases on which to base their evaluation.

The report was critical of the PSC for failing to have established telephone company rate-setting procedures, having a vague "zone of reasonableness" for phone firms exceeding their authorized rate of return, and spotty analysis of service standards in phone cases.

It should be added that all signs point to a de-emphasis on PSC staff work in monitoring regulated industry and in prepping the commissioners for making decisions. This de-emphasis can only lead to stronger industry input in the regulatory process.

As opposed to Gay's view of the report, Commissioner Eric Rasmussen of Fairmont said the report is fair and to the point. "... generally the report is accurate and well-researched," Rasmussen said.

His opinion is the more credible in our view because Rasmussen is the one commissioner who consistently weighs all aspects of cases before the commission. He has demonstrated that he understands that regulation was not invented solely for the benefit of industry but that it also exists for the protection of the consumer. Rasmussen doubtless would like to see the commission adopt, where needed, standards and procedures which would work toward the end of evenhanded regulation.

There have been steps taken in that direction in the recent past, but it is also the recent history of the commission that often one step forward is followed by two steps backward.

It is hoped that the Legislature will take an interest in the staff report and, with its budgetary and lawmaking powers, act as an influence for changing some of the regulatory practices at the commission.

New York — The two-party system seems at the moment to have turned into a what-and-a-half party system. The what party, of course, is the old Democratic Party, but calling it by its old name tells us very little about it. The real question is, what is it?

Even its most august members cannot say right now. This is because it has just been captured by a group of independents with no past performance record worth basing a guess on, and the regulars still don't know what the new crowd plans to do with them.

One thing we can say for sure is that, this not being China, none of them will be thrown into solitary. Hubert Humphrey and Edward Kennedy, two of the more bumptious representatives of the old regime, may find their names unflatteringly written on the Washington equivalent of Chinese wall posters, which are called newspaper columns, but even they will probably be allowed to keep their horses for the spring plowing.

For Democrats the future is all anticipation. They haven't known what they are since their nervous breakdown in Chicago during the 1968 convention. They are looking forward to Dr. Carter to tell them. If he is canny, as a few presidents of political genius have been, he can give the party a brand new identity in the next two years. If he isn't, as most presidents aren't, the Democrats will have to be happy continuing to get elected en masse every two years and quarreling ineffectually about how to deal with the present lackluster situation.

A lackluster situation is a situation in which the Titanic, having hit an iceberg, doesn't sink, but doesn't get unhooked from the iceberg either, with the result that everybody has to get used to being satisfied with staring at the North Atlantic for the next six years. To the Republican half-party—continuing to call it a party would be to perpetuate a delusion—even a lackluster situation would look like a reasonable facsimile of Paradise just now.

About all the Republican Party can do well any more is run for the presidency. For the rest, it has a handful of governors left, controls a few state legislatures and, in Congress, shows signs of disappearing into inconsequence. Since its crippling defeat in the 1968 elections, it has shriveled progressively—or conservatively, if you prefer—into a kiddie-size party. It has not controlled the Congress in 22 years.

With a Republican president, the half-party at least has a function. It can help uphold vetoes, which is to say it can keep things from being done. A good case can be made for occasional government inactions, but no party ever swept to glory by promising, if elected, to do nothing.

Without a Republican president giving them vetoes to uphold, the half-party is now reduced to the task of simple preservation and heavy prayer that the cops may soon catch a Georgian at the Watergate.

Not all the members are committed even to preservation. Ronald Reagan now talks about a new party structure which might not necessarily retain the "Republican" name. He speaks for the conservatives, and we can suppose that he is talking about a new conservative party.

There are two problems with this idea. The first is that Reagan, the conservatives' most dynamic figure, will be a bit old to run for president by 1980, while younger conservatives are having a hard time getting elected to anything.

The second is that Dr. Carter is making the sounds of a man threatening to outfit the Democrats with the conservatives' favorite issue—cutting the budget. Can the half-party be saved by the "moderates," that genteel assortment of losers who followed Nelson Rockefeller until he embraced Barry Goldwater? Nothing is impossible in politics, but this comes close. With Rockefeller gone, the "moderates" have no spirit, no fight, no ideas and no leadership.

How will it all end? It won't, but in the meantime, if we are lucky, we may see the old what-and-a-half-party system give way to two, three or four real parties that might revive American political life.

Funds for flowers, but not Humane Society

Humane Society needs

Lincoln, Neb. — I heard Mr. Patton on the television one morning, and I am so angry at what the City Council wants to do with our Humane Society. I want our Humane Society maintained.

Our city puts all that money into making O Street beautiful and then can't support the Humane Society. I think this is ridiculous!

They have no vet nor the money to hire one at the society. Is our United Way falling apart? Can't we be humane enough to keep a dog shelter supported?

Boost for Charlie

Tecumseh, Neb. — In a reference to a recent letter, the writer who signs himself "Crystal" must surely have Rep. Charles Thone confused with someone else.

As a registered Democrat, and I know some others who will say the same, I think that Charles Thone is the best representative of the state of Nebraska has had in Washington for a long time.

Problem solved

Lincoln, Neb. — No more adult Christmas gift problems this way—wrong size—wrong color—or "we have one of those."

Give your grown-ups a box of bath flakes, a four-pack of bathroom tissue or a two-pound can of coffee, and put a ten or twenty inside.

Listen to the squeals of delight when they open the package and holler: "Oh, boy, just what I needed—a four-pack of Charmin!"

Cover story

Lincoln, Neb. — The number of Americans missing in action from the Vietnam war is 783, according to the Pentagon. After World War II, 6,056 were listed as MIA and after Korea, 5,127. In both cases, all were listed presumed dead one year and one day after the conclusion of the war.

Despite the smaller number and the year and a half that have passed, when we vetoed Vietnam's admission to the United Nations last week, we gave MIA's the reason. Before, MIA's were the reason to sign a peace agreement—and keep fighting. MIA's were the reason, when they had run out of reasons, for the war itself.

War survivors face the job of healing and rebuilding. So far, we seem unable to begin the process of reconciliation with Vietnam. Perhaps we must first face the fact that MIA's are not a national cause, but rather the last official cover story.

Credit to sisters

Lincoln, Neb. — In this era of growing recognition of women's achievements, it was indeed a pleasure to find in the Nov. 17 Star a reminder of an important but too little known 19th Century female writer. Henry Longfellow's sister, Dorothy, married the Rev. Thomas Wadsworth, a cousin from whose family the poet's middle name was derived.

After her husband's untimely death in the great Mount Willey landslide in Crawford Notch, New Hampshire—memorialized by Nathaniel Hawthorne in his story of "The Ambitious Guest"—Dorothy accompanied her brother on his walking tour through the wilds of the Lake Superior country. To her detailed "Journals," edited and published by Prof. Thomas H. Johnson, the New England literary historian, Henry owed some of the finer descriptive passages in "Hiawatha."

She later went with him on a similar tour in Nova Scotia and Louisiana, where again her sharp eye for scenery and character provided him with some of the more memorable descriptive passages in "Evangeline."

It is to be hoped that interest in women's writing may bring forth more of the diaries of the sisters of authors. Perhaps we may find that other male writers owed more to the diaries of their sisters or mothers than they ever openly admitted.

Lincoln High mail

Lincoln, Neb. — All of a sudden there is a big push, especially by The Lincoln Star, for a mail in front of Lincoln High. It is actually not such a bad idea if it were thought through a little better and if the proper reasons were given for it.

To use a mail to prevent injuries to people at the hands of lunatic drivers is ridiculous. I could demand a mail in front of my house then, too. There are plenty of lunatic drivers who like to open up wide on the enticing 2900 block of J Street. Our street is especially dangerous at about the time school lets out and all the kiddies are helling around in their 400-horsepower toys.

To reduce the number of lunatic drivers, why doesn't Lincoln High permit students to drive to school only in exceptional cases? Why can't more high school students walk, ride bicycles or take the bus to school? Why doesn't the state raise the driving age to 18?

If the city should decide in favor of a mail, why could there not be a bus lane so that bus service could be continued on J Street? After all, bus riders are people, too. With proper planning, a mail could really enhance the appearance of Lincoln High and yet not disrupt bus service.

I do not wish to imply that lunatic drivers are found only among the students of Lincoln High. The arguments for a mail presented in The Lincoln Star seem, however, to do just that.

Sunday liquor sales

Lincoln, Neb. — "To each his own," it is said. Some want liquor sales on Sunday. I say that it is unnecessary. People have a whole week to store up, leaving the Sabbath to go to church or sleep off Saturday night's hangover.

With teenagers already having a drinking problem and certainly too many drunken drivers killing innocent drivers and pedestrians, it seems that one day could be set aside for a closed house. Every other store closes on Sunday. Certainly liquor shops should close on Sunday also.

Nebraska always has been against such open sales. Why now, all of a sudden, must Lincoln weaken?

The life you save from your own drunken driving or another stoned driver may be your own, a loved one, or a helpless little one.

Narrow Margin

DeWitt, Neb.

I would like to thank the 48% of the voters in southeast Nebraska who voted for me for Board of Regents. The unofficial count showed I carried eight counties, lost by 30 votes in Richardson, 830 in Saline, and 3,102 in Sarpy County. My total was 29,335 to 32,310 for Prokop, or a difference of fewer than 3,000 votes. There must have been a big error in the figure reported Nov. 3, showing me losing by a big margin.

My defeat will in no way lessen my interest in helping provide adequate educational opportunities for all Nebraskans on all levels at a cost we can afford. I will continue to work for a productive research program at the University of Nebraska and the continuation of a sound extension program throughout the state.

The drunk driver

Blair, Neb.

Governor Exon has done a magnificent job during his six-year tenure in office, to date, in supplying inspirational leadership in the reduction of deaths on our state highways.

This paradoxically, while our Unicameral Legislature over the same six years under guise of self-survival or under the dominance of a judicial committee headed by a lawyer, with Nebraska Bar backing persists in making it easier legally for drunk drivers to escape penalty for their misdeeds.

"Implied consent" once so effective has had its teeth removed by an indulgent Legislature. There are now more ways to escape jail and to lose one's driving privileges because of drunken driving than one ever dreamed possible through the beneficent cooperation of local prosecutors, cute defense lawyer manipulation and permissive judges, the latter given life tenure by a compliant Legislature under a 1972 law.

All of this, after we are told that the drunk driver is the main cause of death and destruction on our highways.

We should ask our senators, "How come?"

In defense of Tom

Lincoln, Neb.

As usual after all Husher losses or ties, I've heard nothing but grumbling, griping, and of course the continuing demands to "can Osborne." This is the fourth year of it and it's getting nauseating, to say the least.

Where were all these "experts" when Bob D. went six and four during both the 1967 and 1968 seasons? For one thing, we hadn't at that time become quite so accustomed to excellence, since it didn't arrive until 1962. Also, the two national championships hadn't even further distorted our values—although NO ONE would like to see us Number One better than I.

Nebraska fans often forget that frequently, when there's a change of the guard, many dynasties either crumble or at least have a few sub-par years before rebounding. It happened at Missouri, it happened at Oklahoma. To jog a few memories, Nebraska was 9-2-1 in Bob's last season, and 9-2-1 in Tom's first year. Yes, the dynasty did, and does survive.

So—Tom's not a chair-throwing Woody Hayes. Thank goodness. "Nice guys finish last" was originally leveled by Leo Durocher at Mel Ott, the likable New York Giant superstar-manager. It has been disproven time and time again by many fine athletes on and off the field. Anyone who assumes that because a jock or a coach can't get the adrenalin flowing fast enough because he's a dedicated Christian man should look at the examples set by Tom Landry, Elvin Hayes, Brooks Robinson, Jeff Kinney, John Wooden, Monte Johnson and Steve Davis.

God bless ya, Tom, and keep up the good work!

BOB AMMON

High-priced coffee

Lincoln, Neb.

I think the only way the average citizen is going to help stop inflation is to seriously do without.

Most housewives feel anger when they see prices up a nickel or a dime on each item each time they shop. But recently one little example riled me up more than usual. We use the freeze-dried coffee and I buy the small jars. I remember time before last, the price was $1.39. Last time I bought one, it was $2.29, an increase of 40 cents. And now I have just got another—and the price was $2.69, another increase of 40 cents.

It must stop somewhere. Shall we bring it to a stop with us, the small consumer?

Blind youth marches in band

Corey (center) marches straight with the help of a cord tied to fellow bandsmen.

San Diego (AP) — The line is straight, the marching crisp. In the stands, nobody but his relatives and friends knows the 17-year-old snare drummer for Point Loma High School is blind.

Blind since birth, Robert Corey Jr. says he is living "a dream I never hoped even to dream."

A cord made by his father connects the youth to the belt loops of fellow drummers on each side to guide him through the band's maneuvers.

At first, band director H. Dean Hickman couldn't figure out how young Corey, the only blind student in school, could perform.

"Mr. Hickman had never had a blind student in a marching band before and had never seen it done," Robert said Tuesday. "I was supposed to be going straight but I wound up going in a circle. Everybody laughed, and I wondered what was going on."

"When they told me, I laughed too."

Hickman tried tying Robert to other band members with light fishing line and nylon cord, but neither was successful. A heavier cord, with snaps and hooking rings on the ends, did the trick.

Robert has since performed in three halftime shows at Point Loma High football games as well as in the all-city band night in San Diego Stadium and a parade through downtown neighboring El Cajon.

Just 'a bunch of monkeys in a rain barrel'

Washington (UPI) — A veteran lawmaker said Tuesday the public perception of Congress at work, as viewed from the House or Senate visitors galleries, is that of "a bunch of monkeys in a rain barrel."

"The most disillusioning experience for visitors to Washington is leaving with no comprehension of what they saw after a visit to Congress," Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., told the Commission on Administrative Review.

"We ought to set up our galleries so the people leave with some comprehension of what they saw rather than leave with an impression of a bunch of monkeys in a rain barrel," said Conable, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee.

League of Cities for drug decriminalization

Denver (AP) — Strong support has emerged from the nation's biggest group of municipal officials to decriminalize all drugs, including heroin, as part of a vigorous attack on the street terror that illicit drug trafficking brings to America's cities.

Decriminalization, the removal of criminal penalties for possession and use of narcotics, was endorsed this week by the key committees on policy and resolutions of the National League of Cities. The proposal goes to the league's 3,000-member Congress of Cities on Wednesday.

"The increase in drug-related crime and drug-related deaths are an insufferable burden on urban economies," said Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., who shepherded the proposal through the committees.

If the congress approves the resolution, decriminalization would become official league policy. League staff members in Washington could lobby for federal laws implementing the policy.

The league is a group of mayors and other elected city officials. Its annual meeting ends Wednesday, with the expected election of the 52-year-old league's first woman president, Seattle council member Phyllis Lamphere.

Mrs. Lamphere chaired the Resolutions Committee session in which drug decriminalization was approved without dissent.

Hatcher said city officials are more and more frustrated with law-enforcement efforts to curb drug traffic. The proposal he guided through its committee tests on Monday reads:

"Whenever feasible, alcohol and drug abuse should be decriminalized and handled as a behavioral health problem, as long as persons are held fully accountable for any deviant or criminal actions while under the influence of these substances."

Hatcher said he could not guess whether the full Congress of Cities will approve the proposal but added: "The giant social cost of drug traffic — the burglaries, the robberies, the terror," may finally lead the city officials to take "this giant step."

Barbara Ackerman, council member from Cambridge, Mass., said the proposal should be secondary to efforts to define and eliminate the reasons drug addiction continues to spread across the United States.

Hatcher agreed but said: "We're not suggesting that heroin be put on the market at the corner drugstore," only that it be treated as a health problem rather than as a criminal problem.

He said decriminalization would remove the financial incentives from drug trade. "This is a big-bucks operation, and we want it stopped cold," Hatcher said.

The league policy proposal also calls for more strict police antidrug activities, new research on pharmaceutical approaches to controlling drug abuse and more treatment and rehabilitation opportunities for addicts.

The resolutions committee killed an attempt to eliminate the league's policy favoring registration of handguns.

Miffed mayor summons peers

Shenandoah, Iowa (UPI) — David Childs, mayor of this small southwestern Iowa town, was miffed he wasn't invited to the National Mayor's Conference recently in Chicago, so he called his own.

He will convene the National Rural Communities Mayors Conference Wednesday morning for all the "undesirables" to what he called the "big city" mayors conference.

Most of the 16 mayors who responded by late Tuesday and will join Childs at the meeting in the Shenandoah City Hall are from nearby.

Fishery is largest
Jefferson City, Mo. (UPI) — The Osage River near Osceola, Mo., is the largest fishery in the free world, according to the state Conservation Commission.

Annually, as many as 20,000 paddlefish are caught in the area.

GOP's image 'elitist'

Washington (UPI) — The nation's Republican governors were told Tuesday that the GOP is not dead but could end up on the critical list if it cannot shed an elitist image and quit bickering over ideology.

The tiny band of Republican governors, their numbers reduced to 12 in last month's elections, came to their annual winter meeting expecting "a graveside service," said Gov. Robert Bennett of Kansas who was elected chairman of the GOP Governors Association.

"But the funeral that was scheduled for the Republican Party will not be held," Bennett told the concluding, sparsely attended session. "The feared victim is alive and commencing satisfactorily."

But Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., warned the state chief executives the party is in danger of fading into history while "clinging to some narrow notion of ideological purity."

In a plea for party unity, Dole said the party's right and left wings are in "fruitless competition" and "if this condition persists and we spend the next four years splitting ideological hairs, we are going to be very ineffectual as the party in opposition."

"We have to find the common ground we can all stand upon, and not isolate ourselves on separate islands that drift further and further apart," declared Dole, who was the GOP vice presidential nominee this year.

Dole also said the party has a "dogmatic, elitist image" that must be thrown off by offering "realistic alternatives" to Democratic programs.

The governors approved resolutions encouraging construction of nuclear power plants and supporting "sunbelt" legislation at the state level to require periodic review of all state programs.

Despite opposition from Gov.-elect James Thompson of Illinois, the governors also approved a resolution offered by Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire adopting the party platform as the principles the governors will "support and will work to implement during the next four years."

Thompson said, "We failed to receive a mandate in the last election. Blanket adoption of the party's last platform would be seen as inconsistent with broadening the party's base of support."

National park use increases

Washington (UPI) — Americans have been going to national parks in even larger numbers than expected for the bicentennial year, with a big increase in off-season visitors adding to the July 4 crowds, officials said Tuesday.

On the basis of use through September, the National Park Service estimates 300 million people will visit the parks during 1976 — about 30 million, or 14%, more than last year.

Last winter, officials predicted the bicentennial year would draw about 280 million persons to the nearly 300 national park areas.

One surprise is the large increase in off-season visitors.

Although there has been a recent trend toward more visitors in the spring, fall and winter months, Park Service economist Molly Brady said parks use in the 1976 off-season has been unusually high.

The Park Service was so concerned about large crowds jamming the parks that it ran promotions urging Americans to plan ahead before traveling to them this year.

Home rule bill sets off uproar

London (AP) — Britain's Labor government introduced a bill Tuesday that would grant a measure of home rule to Scotland and Wales. Both advocates and critics said the proposal involved the greatest constitutional change for the United Kingdom in centuries.

The proposal fanned a political fire.

Scottish and Welsh nationalists attacked it, saying it did not give their homelands enough autonomy. Northern Ireland Unionists protests it made no mention of their province, once semi-autonomous but now ruled directly from London because of the sectarian violence there.

Eighty Laborites criticized it because there is no plan to hold a national referendum on the issue and the opposition Conservatives claimed it would break up the United Kingdom of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

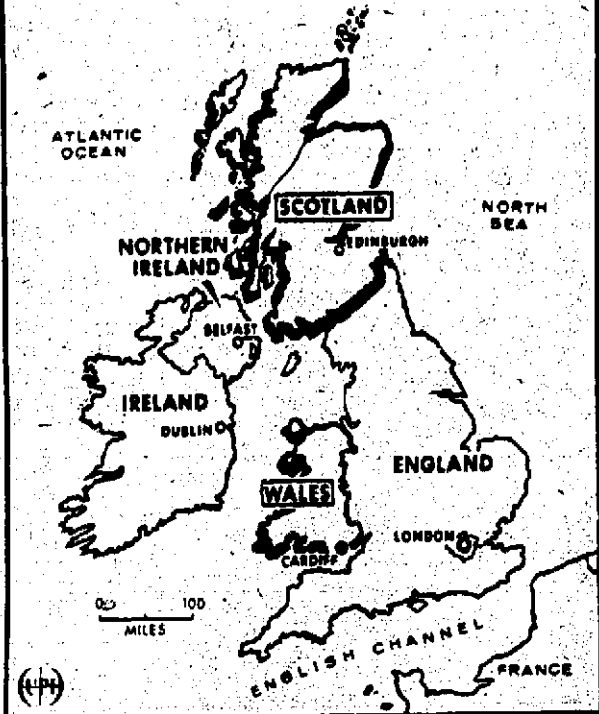

Despite the uproar, political commentators predicted the Devolution Bill will become law within a year.

Nationalist sentiment is strongest in Scotland, where the exploitation of North Sea oil has spurred hopes he country may one day be politically and economically independent.

But Prime Minister James Callaghan's government stressed that the bill would not give Scotland direct access to the oil revenues.

At a news conference, Labor's leader in the House of Commons, Michael Foot, said the aim is to preserve the United Kingdom.

"If we didn't have devolution of this nature, the chances of a breakup of the United Scotland and Wales are directly affected.

Kingdom would be much greater," Foot said.

The bill, which is expected to take up about two-thirds of the year-long session of Parliament that began last Wednesday, "devolves" certain powers to popularly elected regional assemblies.

The assemblies, in Edinburgh and Cardiff, would have legislative power in such areas as education, local government, culture, the environment, industrial development, agriculture and housing.

They would have no revenue-raising powers, such as levying taxes. And the bill makes no mention of the vast reservoirs of oil off Scotland's coasts. The London government maintains North Sea oil is a national resource to be shared by the nation as a whole.

The bill falls far short of the complete independence wanted by the Scottish Nationalist Party. The SNP views North Sea oil as the thing that could make an independent Scotland financially viable.

It was the growing strength of the SNP that poded the Labor government of Prime Minister James Callaghan to give top priority to devolution in this parliamentary session despite a host of economic problems also calling for legislative action.

The Scottish Nationalists jumped from one seat in the 635-member House of Commons in 1967 to 11 in the last elections, in October 1974. Their share of the popular vote in Scotland went from less than one per cent in the 1950s to more than 30 per cent in the last election.

The Labor government, which survives on a razor-thin majority in the House of Commons, fears that the SNP — unless mollified — will make it impossible to govern.

But the Scottish Nationalists view the Devolution Bill as merely a step on the road to independence. They were buoyed by a poll published Monday in Glasgow's Daily Record indicating that 44 per cent of its readers want independence, while 15 per cent favor the status quo and 40 per cent want an assembly such as that proposed.

In Wales, there is strong nationalist sentiment but no widespread demand for total independence. The Welsh nationalist party, Plaid Cymru, has three seats in the House of Commons. But the party general secretary, Dafydd Williams, said the bill discriminates against Wales by allowing a wider range of powers devolved to Scotland.

The government does not have the support of all Labor members of the House on the issue. Seventy-six Labor MPs have called for a referendum.

The opposition Conservative party says it favors devolution in principle.

Bank burglars use a generator

Milan, Italy (AP) — Burglars who stole an estimated $5 million to $6 million in gold, jewels and money from safe-deposit boxes at a Milan bank had their own generator to provide lighting and to power electric drills, police said Tuesday.

"The underworld is increasingly resorting to technologicaly advanced equipment against which traditional antitheft devices are useless," said Police Chief Umberto Pagnozzi.

The burglars, believed to number between six and 10, broke into the Lombardy Province Savings Bank over the weekend and looted about 450 safe-deposit boxes. Police said they got through the bank's outer doors, possibly with duplicate keys, then used blow torches and drills to get into the armored room. A generator was among things left at the site.

Bank officials estimated the value of the haul at 5 million to 6 million.

They could not stay unnoticed inside the bank for one or two days. What were the watchmen doing over the weekend," asked another customer.

A bank official said the watchmen were probably deceived by the sight of the undamaged outside doors.

Most of the box holders will get little compensation as the bank had each box insured for only $1,200. Only a few customers had insured the contents for larger amounts because it involves a lot of red tape, including frequent checks by a notary, bank sources said.

Italians, like the French who suffered losses in safe-deposit robberies, are reluctant to reveal the contents of their boxes for tax and other reasons.

"I will get practically nothing for jewels which were worth at least 50 million lire ($60,000)," said one customer.

Bank sources reported the thieves also took away foreign currency and some gold in addition to jewels and cash in lire.

However, customers would hardly report the disappearance of foreign currency and gold as their possession is illegal under present Italian banking laws.

Ten persons have been arrested in France in connection with the Nice robbery, but police have not said whether they are also suspected in the Paris raid. Some of the Nice loot has also been recovered, but police have not said how much.

French police said Alberto Spaggiari, the confessed ringleader of the Nice gang, told them he gave his share of the loot to a group called La Catena (the chain), which allegedly helps rightists in Italy, Spain and Yugoslavia.

"The loot could be higher. But we will never know for sure. Contents of boxes are secret and many customers will never disclose what they have lost," said Giorgio Bassetti, a bank officer.

Two similarly audacious raids were made on safe-deposit vaults of branches of a French bank last summer in Nice and Paris. What has been dubbed the "sewer gang" made its way through the sewers of Nice in rafts in mid-July and tunneled into the vault, then spent a weekend rifling an estimated 60 million to $10 million worth of cash and valuables.

A month later, a gang used the same technique to take about $5 million from safe-deposit boxes at the Societe Generale branch on the Ile St. Louis in Paris.

It was a mystery how the thieves entered the Milan bank, known in Italian as the Cassa di Risparmio delle Provincie Lombarde, and how they remained unnoticed during what must have been a long stay. The bank doors were found undamaged when employees reopened the bank Monday, leading police to speculate that the gang had duplicate keys.

"The thieves must have spent several hours inside as they left behind empty bottles and partly eaten sandwiches. They acted at ease," said Chief Pagnozzi. Investigators said the burglars left no firm clues in what could be the largest bank theft ever in Italy.

"We can only hope that a member of the gang takes a false step," said one investigator.

Dozens of customers rushed to the bank offices Monday and Tuesday after learning of the burglary. Some fainted when told they had been robbed of all their valuables.

Islam exhorted to free Jerusalem from Israells

Cairo, Egypt (AP) — King Khaled of Saudi Arabia exhorted the Islamic world Tuesday to free Jerusalem from Israeli hands as more than 1.5 million white-robed Moslems converged on Mt. Arafat to end their Hajj, Islam's annual pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca.

The pilgrims, who gathered to "stone the devil" at the conclusion of the weeklong ritual, sang hymns and chanted "rescue Jerusalem, oh Khaled" as the king delivered his address, which was broadcast from Saudi Arabia throughout the Arab world to most of Islam's 300 million believers.

The speech was monitored in Arab capitals.

'People's Peace Prize' ceremony emotional

Oslø, Norway (AUP) — Mrs. Betty Williams and Mrs. Mairead Corrigan — the Catholic leaders of Northern Ireland's Women's peace movement — Tuesday received a $300,000 "People's Peace Prize" in an emotional ceremony in Oslo's Town Hall.

"The price is an outstretched hand to women who could no longer bear the sorrow for the fate of the children (of Northern Ireland)," said Mrs. Gerd Beneche, chairwoman of the Norwegian Press Association, presenting the award.

Mrs. Beneche said it might be difficult for Norwegians to grasp the depth of the Irish problem, "but the cry for humaneness which you have raised — not least on behalf of the children — that cry we recognize and understand.

"You have started a movement which has a message for all those across the world who refuse to capitulate to hatred and violence."

More than 1,500 people crowded into the hall and several hundred more gathered outside applauded as Mrs. Beneche embraced both women and presented the prize money, contributed by 100,000 Norwegians, and two gold medals featuring the winners' portraits.

The women said they would use the money to build a center for Roman Catholic and Protestant children in Northern Ireland.

After the ceremony, an estimated 10,000 Norwegians joined a torchlight parade through downtown Oslo as a further tribute to Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Corrigan.

The pair were received by King Olav V. earlier Tuesday.

"We were deeply moved and impressed by the great interest the king took in our work for peace. He was well informed on the situation in Northern Ireland," Mrs. Williams told reporters outside the royal palace after the 20-minute audience.

Texas killer wants to die

Washington (AP) — A convicted murderer from Texas has told the Supreme Court he wants to die as scheduled on Dec. 10 in a prison electric chair.

"I am mentally prepared to accept the judgment of sentence. Any delay now will only inflict needless mental hardship on me," Robert Earl White, 30, of Waco, Tex., wrote the clerk of the court. His letter was dated Nov. 23 and released Tuesday.

But White's attorney appealed to Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. Tuesday to delay the execution. J. E. Abernathy, appointed by a Texas court to represent White, told Powell he will challenge the state's death penalty law, the indictment that charged White with murder and the trial's method of jury selection.

White is the second man in current news accounts to ask that his death sentence be carried out.

In Salt Lake City, the Utah Board of Pardons refused on Tuesday to commute the death sentence of convicted murderer Gary Gilmore. Gilmore told the board his sentence was proper and that he wants to die.

Gilmore, 35, had been scheduled to die Nov. 15 before a firing squad, but Utah Gov. Calvin Rampton stayed the execution date so the pardons board could consider the matter. In his letter to the Supreme Court, White said, "Mr. Abernathy is acting against my express instructions and desire. I explicitly told him that I did not wish any federal appeal of any sort whatsoever."

White was convicted of murder with two other men, James and Gary Dale Livingston, in a 1974 holdup of a rural grocery store in North Texas. Three persons, a 73-year-old proprietor and two 18-year-old customers, were gunned down during the robbery.

Appearing at a Nov. 1 hearing in which his execution date was set, White told the judge, "If any man deserves to die, I do for the crimes I've committed."

Supreme Court officials also released a copy of a letter White sent to his attorney, saying:

"I thought I made it very clear to you that I did not want you to take any further steps to delay my scheduled execution. I did not want you making any efforts in my behalf."

White, a prisoner at Huntsville, Tex., told his attorney, "I have thought the matter over very carefully and do not wish to prolong this situation. I am ready to face the judgment, and any further delays will only increase needlessly what I have come to consider my inevitable end."

Powell, who represents the court in timely matters from the 5th U.S. Circuit, referred Abernathy's request for a delay to the full court for consideration by all the justices. There was no indication when the court will decide on the request.

Denial of care may be 'cruel'

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday it may be "cruel and unusual punishment" for prison officials to deny an inmate adequate medical care, and said state prisoners claiming such mistreatment may sue in federal court.

Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote the medical care opinion with six other justices concurring.

He said failure to provide a prisoner adequate medical care could cause physical "torture or a lingering death" and — if such failure were deliberate — would amount to "cruel and unusual punishment" forbidden by the 8th Amendment.

That would give a state prison inmate leeway to take his case to federal court. But Marshall said not every claim of inadequate treatment has constitutional status, because accidents can happen and doctors can be negligent.

"In order to state a cognizable claim," he said, "a prisoner must allege acts or omissions sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs."

The ruling concerned the Texas case of J.W. Gamble, an inmate at the state prison in Huntsville, who was injured when a bale of cotton fell on him during prison yard work.

Gamble complained of back pain. Doctors gave him pills and soon decided he could do light work, but he refused.

In line with a 1972 Supreme Court opinion, it has been recognized that state prisoners may sue prison officials for deprivation of federal civil rights.

But as to medical treatment, lower federal courts generally have found only refusal of care — not merely inadequate care — to be a constitutional violation.

Tuesday's ruling gave Gamble no immediate satisfaction, however, because the court found his claim did not involve deliberate mistreatment by the doctors involved.

The case goes back to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, so Gamble may pursue his complaint against other prison system officials.

Baron accused of soliciting kickback

Chicago (AUP) — Alvin Baron, former assets manager of the scandal-ridden Teamsters Central States Pension Fund, was indicted Tuesday on charges he sought and received a $300,000 kickback to grant a $1.3 million loan to a California cemetery operator.

Baron, 51, a Las Vegas attorney, was named in a nine-count federal indictment. He was accused of using the mail, telephones and wires in a scheme to defraud the $1.4 billion pension fund and of reporting his gross income in 1974 as $66,264 when he knew it was higher.

If convicted, Baron could face a maximum 41-year prison term and fines of $22,000.

The grand jury indictment said Baron, then a suburban Schaumburg resident, "knowingly and wilfully did solicit and agree to receive a fee, kickback, commission of $300,000 from Foy Bryant, president and owner of Mount Vernon Memorial Park, a cemetery in Fair Oaks, Calif., in return for the $1.3 million loan approved by the pension fund's board of trustees Dec. 12, 1974."

U.S. Atty. Samuel K. Skinner, who announced the indictment, said the pension fund and its present executive director and assets manager, Daniel J. Shannon, "cooperated fully in the investigation."

A fund spokesman said Bryant, a flamboyant operator who has given away cloth-covered wooden casket funerals valued at $475 for the past two Christmases, called the attention of the new fund management to the alleged kickback.

"This guy Bryant came in and wanted a modification of his loan," a fund spokesman said. "We looked it over and it had an item for $300,000."

"That's the money I paid Al Baron," Bryant was reported to have said. "That was the money to get the loan."

Baron was assets manager of the fund for three years starting in 1972, taking over from his close associate, Allen Dorfman, who was convicted that year on charges he accepted a $5,000 kickback for approving another pension fund loan.

The Baron indictment was part of a joint investigation by the Justice and Labor Departments into alleged operating irregularities and questionable loans granted by the fund, which claims 300,000 participants in more than 300 locals in 33 states.

Skinner said the "joint task force" looking into fund operations was continuing its "fact finding process." He said he was hopeful the task force will meet before the Jan. 20 change of administration in Washington and decide "which is the best way to fulfill our responsibilities to the Teamsters."

"I'm certain the effort will continue," Skinner said. Skinner said no other indictments were likely in the near future. He described the work as a "large undertaking, not one year or two years, but a four to five to seven-year project."

Young women tell what happened after running away

New York (AP) — One of them was 11 years old the first time she tried to commit suicide by taking a drug overdose. Another was 13 when she ran away from home to escape beatings administered by her drunken mother. The third was 15 when she started selling drugs and her body to support the narcotics habit of her 25-year-old lover.

The three young women were witnesses Tuesday at a hearing of the state Assembly's Standing Committee on Child Care. It was the second of three sessions examining runaways and juvenile prostitutes and how law enforcement and social agencies deal with them.

All three of the young women who testified on Tuesday — two of Irish and Spanish background and the third a black — told of running away from unhappy homes and living in parks and building hallways, taking up dope and prostitution after falling in with older men. "A frightened girl on her own makes easy pickings for the experienced pimp or any older protective figure," Dr. Mitchell S. Rosenthal, a child psychiatrist, said in introducing the witnesses, evidently New Yorkers, although information about where they grew up was not disclosed.

All three are currently enrolled in Phoenix House, a long-term rehabilitation residence program that Rosenthal helped found. The psychiatrist said out-patient care is inadequate for such young women because that type of treatment doesn't remove them from the environment in which their problems developed.

A majority of the nation's estimated one million runaways: a year are female, he said, and most of them flee from homes that "cannot provide the physical or emotional security young people need."

Diana Williams, 21, said she ran away from home at age 13.

"Mother used to drink a lot," she said. "Every time my mother got drunk she would beat me. I had no place to go. I stayed in hallways and in parks with older people. I met a friend. He started me prostituting when I was 17. He was 42. He had me in the streets every day. I had to bring in a certain amount of money. If not, he would beat me. He had the drugs I needed."

Rose Cruz, 17, told the lawmakers that she found herself in the midst of "a lot of family problems" and both parents beat her. She escaped to the park, smoking pot and drinking with friends, she said.

"At 15 I met Billy, who was 10 years older, and he let me stay in his apartment. Billy got fired from his job, so I thought I had to have a job to pay the bills. I started selling drugs. Then I started selling my body. Billy was a drug addict. . . ."

She said she served nine months in the Manhattan Rehabilitation Center, where she said drug-trafficking was rampant and some of the staff members frequently appeared to be "high."

Nancy Owens, 16, said she first tried to kill herself at age 1 by taking a drug overdose. Her parents were alcoholics, she said, and she tried suicide again during the next three years before she was committed to a mental institution, from which she escaped. At 14, living with a man of 33, she began hustling, she said.

"I needed it for drugs, and the only time I prostituted was when I absolutely needed the money — once or twice a week."

Teachers strike in Kentucky metropolis

Louisville, Ky. (AP) — Jefferson County's teachers went on strike Tuesday, closing the nation's 18th biggest school system and giving an unexpected holiday to more than 110,000 pupils.

The strike, which began officially at 11:01 a.m. CST, was called after negotiators, assisted by a federal mediator, failed to reach an agreement on a contract covering 5,600 teachers.

W. D. Bruce, a Jefferson County Board of Education official, said the strike is the result, in part, of the merger of the city and county school systems and court-ordered desegregation.

Merger of the predominantly black city system and the mostly white county system was in 1975, and a federal judge issued a sweeping desegregation order later that year. "I think we have a number of factors here," said Bruce. "The two systems have merged. The court order for desegregation took additional money. This has definitely had some bearing on this."

Picketing began before dawn in sub-freezing temperatures at all of the county's schools and at bus compounds and school board headquarters. Police said there was no trouble.

Susan Westerman, a spokesman for the striking Jefferson County Teachers Association said she did not know how many of the 4,500 members were on the picket lines, but that the number was substantial. There are about 1,100 teachers who are not members of the JCTA.

Supt. Ernest Grayson told reporters just after the strike was called that he was "disheartened" that no agreement had been reached. He said there would be no classes "until further notice."

Don Dickerson, a National Education Association consultant summoned to assist the local group, said all school employees had been asked to honor picket lines.

The superintendent said the JCTA had rejected the board's "last and final" offer and added the schools were closed to insure the safety of the children. "Only the JCTA can decide how long the strike will last," he said.

JCTA President June Lee said it was impossible to predict how long the strike would last but that teachers were willing to reopen talks at any time. She indicated that, in the event of an injunction against the striking teachers, they might not return to work.

School officials declined comment on what course of action they might take to halt the strike. The Kentucky Supreme Court has ruled in the past that it is illegal for public employees to strike.

A permanent injunction barring teacher strikes in Jefferson County, obtained six years ago when the teachers last struck, is still in effect.

Pets crowd waiting room

By Linda Olig
Star Staff Writer

The little girl, about five, no more, bounced into the room and up to the receptionist's window.

While waiting, she announced that her poodle had just had puppies. She related each birth, down to the last detail.

Snickers were held back! Ah, the honesty of youth. But that wasn't the only reason. This is a veterinarian's office. And anyone who has a pet knows the pride of pet ownership.

From the looks of things, this youngster and the 15-odd human masters in the room, not to mention the varieties of man's best friend were in for a long wait. After all, it was Saturday morning.

My four-legged best friend was due for her annual booster so, like a dutiful pet owner, I had bundled her up and off we had headed for the vet.

Alas, every other nine-to-five was there, too. It was wall to wall dogs and masters. All the seats were taken. "This is not going to be a short stop," I told myself as Whistles and I settled in on the floor.

Conversation came easy. Everyone's proud of his dog, whether it's a blue blood breed or a Dutch blend. Friendships, among masters anyway, were struck immediately, and compliments were exchanged around the room.

They kept coming, dogs and masters, masters and dogs. Some masters, owners of dogs, large and small, left their "best friends" in the car and braved it alone in the waiting room. Others drove by, took one look in the waiting room and went away hoping to make it back another day.

In the vet's office, friends and enemies are made immediately. Two dogs, newfound friends, sparred in the center of the floor. Spectators lined the walls, a scene reminiscent of a prize fight.

A Great Dane tried having a Chihuahua for a midmorning snack; an oversized Irish setter scared the daylight out of a toy poodle.

Whenever a new dog on the scene, he got the once over; not twice but several times, from masters and dogs alike.

"Meow!" The sudden, foreign sound brought every canine ear sky-high.

This particular vet practices segregation of canines and felines, with separate doors, separate waiting rooms. Still, the dogs interrupted their playing, their snooping to be certain their canine territory wasn't being invaded by any feline, fat and furry.

More than the meows, the waiting patients were conscious of sounds coming from the examination rooms. All thoughts of play dissolved whenever there was a puppy yelp or whimper from behind the closed door, a reminder of what they were there for.

There was plenty of time for observation: Waiting time was a minimum of two hours.

There was also time — too much — for leash clutching. Some dogs are born troublemakers. These went up to the more standoffish canines and snooped — er, sniffed — around. The anxious critters growled or barked to ward off more aggressive intrusion. As the last resort, they retreated up their master's leg.

The little girl, dogless, explained that her mother was waiting in the car with the new mother and pups; they didn't want to take any chances on the new mother being disturbed, she announced.

The youngster took an immediate liking to Whistles, a cockapoo, hardly the right selection for a child accustomed to poodles, pure and pampered.

"I have three animals," she said, sharing the attention with no one.

"The poodle and what else?" she was asked.

"Another poodle," she said, teasing, letting curiosity mount.

What could the third be? Certainly no less than a Persian cat or an ocelot. The thoughts bounced off the walls, reverberated around the room.

"Okay, tell us."

Her eyes twinkled with childish delight. She was preparing for the moment of truth, savoring the surprise.

"A gerbil," she said in such a way you know it was her absolute favorite.

Just goes to show, what all pet owners have always known, that beauty is in the eyes of the beholder.

But no matter what the pedigree, they eventually wind up at the vet's... particularly on Saturday mornings.

Final hours linger, suspended in time

By Teresa L. Warne

March 12, 1975. A siren. Yes, I remember the ambulance siren wailing as we rushed to a hospital 25 miles away in Lincoln. R.D. was semi-conscious. I was soon to learn he was on the edge of a coma, which he would never come out of. As I held his hand and listened to his pleas for help, and his begging me to tell someone to help him, I fought back the tears with every bit of strength I had.

We were at the hospital within about 20 minutes. As I stood beside my husband, a cold, chilling thought pierced my entire being: this time I would be going home alone, for good. I went through the motions of giving the office personnel what information they needed. Escorted by a nurse, I hurried back to R.D. By that time intravenous medications had begun. I was called to the phone. It was the doctor. His diagnosis was brief and to the point. Something about a cerebral hemorrhage and the next 24 hours determining whether R.D. would live or die. How did the doctor know that? He'd only seen R.D. for five minutes. R.D. and I had been through bad hospital stays before. I wasn't going to believe this would be any different. It just wasn't!

I went back to his room and stood, trying to be near R.D., yet stay out of the way of the very concerned nurses. He called my name and held his hand out to me. I clutched his cold hand in mine and looked into his pleading eyes. Those were his last conscious moments. Everyone started rushing and leading me to a waiting room outside the intensive care area. It was about 2:00 in the afternoon.

I was only to see him for five minutes each hour after that. His life-weary body was so full of tubes and always attached to monitors. The unconscious seizures remained constant. I signed papers to give my consent for more tests.

That waiting room will always linger in my mind. It was rather small, maybe about the size of a school coat room. Three or four people paced the floor, exchanging sad and some stomach-burning reasons for their being there.

The neurologist called my name. I met his concerned look with all the composure I could manage. Yes, R.D. did have a cerebral hemorrhage. Time was running short. I hurried to his side. "R.D., don't leave me alone. Remember how we said we'd grow old together and you'd probably be bald. I don't want to go on by myself."

Wearisome were the hours that passed. Everyone was so nice to me — the kind of niceness that makes your heart ache with sorrow. I wouldn't let myself believe R.D. was dying. Each time I saw him and held his hand, he seemed to slip further and further away. No longer did he react to my voice or my touch.

About 4:00 in the afternoon, I called my mom and asked if she would keep our dog and ask someone to bring our car to Lincoln so that I could get home the next day. Word spread rapidly throughout the CB populous of Crete.

Mom and Dad arrived around 7:30 P.M.

I couldn't sit still. Much of my time was spent pacing the outer length of the intensive care unit. It was during this time that I saw the minister who had performed our marriage ceremony.

R.D.'s last few minutes were at hand. He was losing the battle of life versus death. His breathing was continued only by the constant effort of medical equipment. The doctor wanted to talk to me on the phone again. My head throbbed with his words, "this looks like the end is very near."

The doctor's quiet voice echoed softly in the hall. The sound of his footsteps grew closer. As my eyes met his, I knew it was over. "Your husband expired a few moments ago."

Shock! It just couldn't be. Even as I stood beside the empty shell of my husband, I could not, I would not let myself believe he was... He was only 31. That's too young.

The road back to Crete seemed to go on for a hundred miles. Now I had to tell his mom. What could I tell her, or how?

R.D. had succumbed to a life-long battle with hemophilia, combined with nearly two years of diabetes requiring daily insulin injections. It was all over, ended, finished.

My watch showed 9:00 P.M.

Teresa L. Warne of Crete is a high school secretary. Her story was written for an adult creative writing class in Crete. The essay is a true story.

Lincoln lunch hour trade tends toward repetition

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

The most interesting aspect of lunch hours in Lincoln is that they're uninteresting.

A random look at local workers, executives, restaurants and cocktail lounges showed overwhelmingly that the period a person takes for the noon meal is his or her least creative time of the day.

For instance, of three restaurant operators questioned in downtown Lincoln, all said the majority of luncheon business consists of the same persons day in and day out.

"Most of the clientele is regular," said Becky Keel, day hostess for the Clayton House Motel restaurant and cocktail lounge. "It seems like there are a lot of familiar faces and though, I don't know them by name, I see them a lot."

Who she sees is a daily average of 120 persons; 85% of whom she estimates are regulars.

Even the food ordered by the luncheoners varies little.

(Ben Haussler, banker: "I go home and fix my own dinner. It's a way to relax.")

"Daily specials represent 60% of our business," said Don Eckel, owner-manager of the Pershing Cafe. The rest of the patrons order sandwiches or salad or both, he said.

The Pershing Cafe is a family type restaurant which serves meals but no liquor.

"We'll serve 350 to 400 people in a lunchtime," Eckel said.

Evidently, at noontime, similar professions and trades pick out like places.

(Howard Hoffmaster, newspaper editor: "I work. I go out and buy my lunch then bring it back to my desk.")

"We get the great middle class: some professional people, some tradesmen, the retail clerks, officer workers, all from this area," Eckel said.

The Clayton House pulls its share from the shirt and tie executive types.

And even the lugubrious tradition confined to the white-collar paper-pushers — the cocktail — is narrowed during noon.

"Bloody Marys for women and martinis for men," Miss Keel said describing her business's fermented fluid intake.

"More women eat here than men," said Gary Mosier, Barrymore's manager.

"And for some reasons we get more orders for Bloody Marys and wine."

(Nancy Jackson, supervisor in retail store: "I go to the lunchroom.")

The incidence of alcohol consumption during the week, Mosier said, "Friday is a big day. We sell more drinks than any other time."

"I doubt if they can get much work done on Friday afternoons," he said.

As for who goes with who, each of the luncheon places said most persons come in pairs or groups.

There's one intrepid group, though, that takes advantage of the midday break to better their bodies.

"I run about once a week," Barbara Schiefelbein, a teller at the National Bank of Commerce's 10th and O St. branch. Other days she said she runs errands to the main bank.

(Anonymous: "Ehh")

Where she runs is the YMCA. About 120 persons a day take advantage of noon physical fitness facilities.

According to Paul Gnadt, physical director for the Lincoln YMCA, the total averages about 40 basketball players, 30 handball players, 40 runners, 20 swimmers and the assorted weightlifters, sauna users and others.

The YMCA's sister organization, the YWCA gets its share too.

About 40 persons a day use the noontime facilities, said Joan Eickhoff.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls I work with has fallen head over heels for a guy she couldn't know very well. Either that, or she's led a very sheltered life.

I've known this guy for years. He's a closet queen who uses girls as a cover-up.

I hate to see this girl get hurt because she is really crazy about him. If he should go so far as to marry her, it can't last very long because he's the type who never stays with one lover very long, but needs a nice straight woman to be seen in public with.

Should I tell her what she's got herself mixed up with? Or let her keep going with him until he breaks her heart?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: The guy could be bisexual, and it's also possible that he has decided to go the straight route. Since it's not possible for you to know what's in his head, I suggest you mind your own business. P.S. Maybe she knows all about him, but loves him anyway.

DEAR ABBY: We are a group of professional middleclass couples who often get together in each other's homes for good conversation. Each hostess serves something.

One of the couples serves on paper plates. Her excuse is that she works and must conserve her energy, and although most of us work, we feel that this is her right. However, whether it's inside or a barbecue, she uses plastic forks, knives and spoons, which she washes and saves for the next party!

We have hinted that as long as she washes the plastic tableware for her next party she might as well use silverware, but she doesn't seem to understand.

Abby, if you've ever tried to eat borscht with a plastic spoon, or macaroni salad with a plastic fork, you'll know what we mean.

After her last party, our husbands told us not to accept another invitation to this couple's home. Our hints have done no good, and we like her too much to drop her. Any suggestions?

PLEASE, NO PLASTIC

DEAR PLEASE: Quit hinting. Come right out and ask her to please save the plastic for picnics and to use silverware. And if that doesn't help, but you like her too much to drop her, bring your own silverware.

Smelling salts needed

San Francisco — We bought flypaper in oblong sheets about the size of legal typing paper. One side was coated with sticky glue. When a fly lit on it, he was a goner. Stuck.

Now we spray them with "Raid". "Keep out of reach of small children."

There were no warnings about children on our flypaper. I don't remember how it came to me to put my head in it. Anyway, I took a nice, fresh sheet and put it on my head.

My grandmother had to cut me loose with a pair of scissors from the sewing basket. I had plenty of hair in those days so it was no loss.

"That boy'll be the death of me yet," she said when she told my grandfather about it. She said if it hadn't been for her smelling salts, she'd have had a conniption fit.

A rumble of distant thunder the other night. I got up and went to the window. The moon was sailing behind clouds. No flash to see where it came from.

My grandmother said electrical storms made her nervous as a cat.

Flash! Bang! "Glory be!" said grandma. "Where did I put the smelling salts?"

All women carried little cut glass bottles of ammonia salts. A sniff of it sent you up the wall.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

They used it when they felt faint. They often felt faint because they were laced up too tight. Or because it thundered. Or when they saw the Western Union messenger coming down the street.

He bore only bad tidings: "Come at once. Sinking fast."

When he passed by our house, grandma let out her breath. "Glory be," she said. And she took a sniff at the little bottle.

Now we know that there was good reason to sniff smelling salts. When it thunders, traffic accidents go up 70%.

Work accidents rise 20%. There are 20% more deaths and 11% more births. Even miners — far underground — have 12% more accidents. When it thunders, go to bed.

Gone with the wind.

Smelling salts and tight corsets. Button hooks, ice picks and the straw hat the iceman's horse wore. There were holes cut in it to let his ears come through. A summer comedy.

We don't have smelling salts, but we have Vitamin E, C, B12. (For hangovers, colds and to put a tiger in your tank.)

By his desk, my grandfather had a brass spittoon. It showed he was an executive.

Now people make lamps out of them.

"We shall hear 'The rain and wind beat dark December.'"

Many years later she wrote me from wintry Illinois to sunny California.

"Seems like the winters are colder than when I was a girl. There's more snow this year than I can remember. Be sure you put on plenty of warm clothes when you go out."

She was never certain I wouldn't get into some unpredictable trouble.

"That boy was not behind the door when the brains were passed out," she said. "But I swear, you never know what he'll think of next."

She prayed I wouldn't become a traveling salesman. They were a flighty lot.

10-4 Red Taper

I sent an application to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) March 12 for a CB license. I have a check showing they received my money, but otherwise I haven't heard a thing and would like to know what is taking so long.

—W. D. Payne, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The FCC regional office in Kansas City says you should have received your license by now. There was a backlog at the commission's CB division a few months ago but that situation has been cleared up. They suggest you write to the CB division, c/o the FCC, Washington, D.C., 20554, about your license. Also send along a copy of the canceled check.

Flying Innkeeper

I regularly see a commercial for Cool Whip, a non-dairy topping, which features a Sarah Tucker at Sarah Tucker Inn. Is there such a person or place as shown in the commercial? I remember when cereal spokesman Essel Gibbons died, and it made me wonder.

—H.P., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Sorry, but Tracy Fennell at the General Food headquarters in New York says the only time Sarah owns an inn is when you see her on television. The rest of the time she is actress Marge Redmond, who was previously a nun on the "Flying Nun" a few years ago, before becoming an "innkeeper."

What's in a Name

While looking through my Readers' Digest, I noticed that after many stories and advertisements, the letters C, TM, R and PP often appeared. Some of them were circled. Can you explain?

—Just Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The symbols are the most visible part of a complex system to protect the use of original thoughts and messages. C, for example, denotes copyright, that the material, often a story or song, belongs the author and cannot be used without permission. TM means trademark; R, that the symbol is registered under the same law. Understandably, companies are jealous of the words and symbols they promote to identify their products. The telephone company bell and the scroiled Coca-Cola label are two of the best-known. PP or the words pat. pending mean the product's owner has applied to protect the original ideas or processes which make the item work. Behind all of the various protective laws is the idea that the fellow with an original thought should not have his just reward drained off by Johnny-Come-Lately copy-cats.

Curiosity sparked gravity research

Turlock, Calif. (AP) — Physicist V.S. Tuman spends a lot of time inside a solid rock cave at Del Puerto Canyon near Turlock watching a suspended, hollow metal ball bounce around measuring gravity waves.

And when people ask him what possible, practical advantage that kind of thing could lead to, the professor has an answer.

"It was not so long ago that people asked Edison what the advantage of a light bulb was and wondered why Faraday was bothering with something like electricity.

"I'm measuring gravity waves out of a scientific curiosity even though I can't see any immediate practical purpose. But sooner or later the engineers will find some application or other. They always do."

A native of Iran who was educated in England, Tuman and his students at Stanislaus State College here pursue their experiments with gravity in a 300 square-foot observatory by recording the earth's natural vibrations.

He offered two analogies as examples to help laymen understand how it's done.

"Think of the earth as a sphere of Jello which takes various shapes and molds and oscillates at different pitches. These are called spheroid oscillations.

"Then there are also oscillations that result when certain gravity waves hit the earth much like fingers striking keys of a piano. Different vibrations are caused by different waves; we've measured 300 modes in all."

The gravity rays that touch off selected oscillations emanate from dying stars at varying intensity. Tuman and his students have classified each pitch with identifying signals and they record the patterns of vibrations as gravity shakes the "Jello" and fingers the "piano keys."

The prehistoric-looking site of his gravity meter is an ideal place to conduct the measurements, Tuman said, because its rock base extends 40 to 50 miles toward the center of the earth. This solid platform acts as a reliable antenna to receive and record the vibrations.

When pressed for a likely future application of his gravity experiments, Tuman said that the waves are a source of energy and could conceivably be used for communication.

Many say it's time to forget WWII

London (AP) — Many Britons are saying in letters to the editor that it is time to lay off the Germans and to let World War II slip back into history. The bad guy role in movies, television programs and comic books should be shared fairly with others, they claim.

The letter writers responded to the German wife of a Briton in Manchester, Bettina von Zugbach de Sugg, who wrote the Times last week that she was "heartily sick" to be reminded at least twice a week through very biased films on television about the bad Nazis and nasty Germans in general.

Responses poured in to the Times. A few writers invited Mrs. Von Zugbach to go back where she came from, but many more supported her.

"We not only have reminders, but train our children to be anti-German," one man wrote the Times. Another quoted a small boy who learned a German businessman was to visit his father's factory: "Oh, daddy, will they bring their guns and try to shoot you?"

The letters coincided with a poll published this week by the West German magazine Quick in which the majority of Germans surveyed wanted the rest of the world to forgive and forget their Nazi past and were unhappy over foreign reminders of it.

Like America, Britain sees German villainy in TV thrillers, documentaries and fictionalized history of the war years. Comic books depict cruel SS troops.

Today's news meanwhile, is dark with killings in Northern Ireland, the diving pound and 18-per-cent-a-year inflation.

"I can't help feeling that the British long for the good old days, even if it is the war, where they were still great and a real world power," wrote Mrs. Von Zugbach.

A literature professor in Norwich agreed: "We compensate for our failure to survive in the world of the 1970s by our heroic (no one disputes that) deeds of the early 1940s."

"Really it is amazing that the Germans have not become more fed up with us and sooner," declared another writer to the Times.

A report that Germans are fed up prompted the original letter from Mrs. Von Zugbach, who has lived nearly three years in England. Her husband's grandfather came to Britain from Germany with Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, and fought for Britain in World War I.

"It's not that I want to change history. I just want there to be a more realistic picture of the present," said Mrs. Von Zugbach in a telephone interview.

State, university pay difficulties alleviated

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Problems between the state and University of Nebraska regarding the state's new $1.5 million payroll-personnel system "have been alleviated," Stan Matzke said Tuesday.

But NU "won't be a full-fledged member" as intended in its participating, at least initially, said the director of the State Department of Administrative Services.

Matzke announced that the "Nebraska Employee Information System" or NEIS will probably be operational sometime in March.

Jan. 1 was the hoped-for target date but was delayed partly because NU officials at first insisted they would use only their own new system being developed separately, then recanted after the controversy was aired before the Legislature's Appropriations Committee.

"It took us approximately $20,000 extra money to write a new system (strictly for NU payroll) so they could run their old tapes on our new system," Matzke said.

He explained that the state will continue to process the NU payroll as in the past, but it will be operated through the new NEIS system without all the data requirements every other state agency must meet.

Meanwhile, "We're attempting to work with the university on this, until the court rules and the Legislature determines their actions" as a result, Matzke said.

He was referring to the lawsuit in which powers of the state vs. the NU Board of Regents are sought to be made more clear. Both sides claimed victories in various parts of a lower court ruling. After a State Supreme Court decision, "If the Legislature has (the higher) authority," Matzke said senators will decide "whether the university comes on the system full-fledged or not."

Each state agency will submit about 100 items for processing regarding employee information, ranging from job classification and pay to vacation and sick leave. Matzke said NU will plug into NEIS only about half that many items, identical to those currently being used, to print their paychecks. NU officials had expressed concerns about invasion of individual privacy, but Matzke had countered that the data will be confidential and protected from unauthorized entry or use or both.

Despite the extra money DAS had to spend to accommodate MU, Matzke said, however, "it was most beneficial" to get off dead-center because Nebraska "had already spent over $1 million" on the "much-needed" system according to legislative intent. He said there are still a few "minor problems" that DAS must work out with NU.

NEIS will replace two systems, one each for personnel and payroll. "Because they were separate," he said, "the personnel system was never kept up to date, because there was no incentive."

For example, "We can tell you how many (pay) checks we write" currently, "but we can't tell you how many (state) employees we have" at any given time, Matzke explained.

Using NEIS, if information on each state job isn't kept up to date, "we will not be able to issue checks," he cited the new incentive. Also, "This'll give us a better handle when we talk about increases" in requested agency budgets, because "we'll know how much money is spent in certain areas, know actual cost."

State's to examine role in regional vet school

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Old West Region academic leaders have agreed on the need for more veterinary education and work is now underway to find each state's role in a future regional school.

At a meeting last week of administrators in the five states — Wyoming, Montana, North and South Dakota and Nebraska — administrators agreed that there is a need for more veterinary education, said Martin Massengale, vice chancellor of the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

A committee, headed by T. F. Hartung, dean of the College of Agriculture, is exploring alternative methods of providing regional education and trying to find each state's role in such a joint effort.

The committee has already concluded that there is a need for such a school, that currently there are not enough Nebraska students being trained to meet replacement needs, said Hartung.

Under a regional school Nebraska might have as many as 37 veterinary training slots a year. "This is not too far off as we look at the state practices and governmental places that veterinary graduates could fill," Hartung said.

Currently Nebraska contracts with six states for the training of approximately 25 students each year.

The committee is now getting a better understanding of how a regional school might operate, said Hartung, explaining two of the methods.

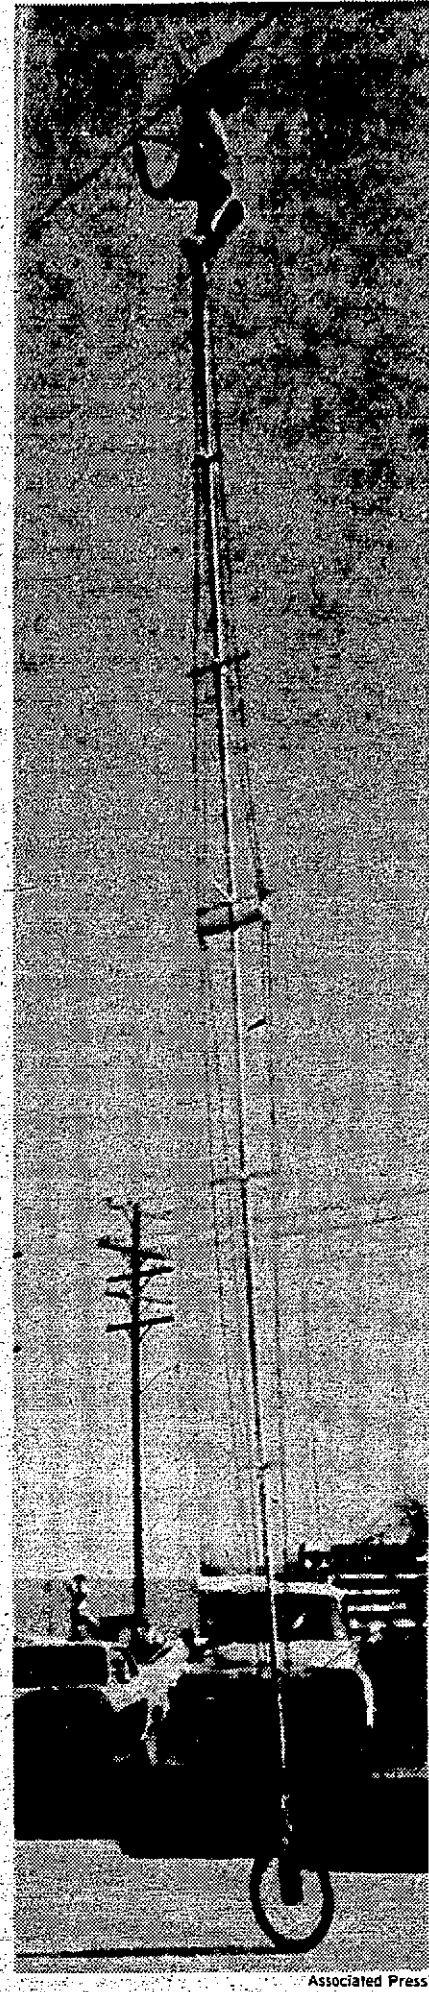

Under one system students would spend their first year in the home state, with the last three years at a central location and a final three months of practical experience back in the home state.

Another system provides that all students begin training at one central location then move on for further study at a second location, Hartung said.

Negligence is claimed as hospital trial opens

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

The attorney for Norma Jean Towle told a jury Tuesday afternoon that her husband died two years ago because a doctor and St. Elizabeth Community Health Center were negligent.

Mrs. Towle is seeking substantial damages from Dr. Robert W. Gillespie and the hospital in a case being tried in Lancaster District Court. The trial is expected to last at least a week, with both sides announcing plans to bring in their own string of "expert" witnesses.

In opening statements to the jury, Omaha attorney Jeff Scott detailed events leading up to Niles Towle's surgery two years ago and his death a few days later.

Towle, who was 42 when he died, decided the only way to lose weight was through an intestinal bypass surgery, Scott said.

Towle was five-feet, ten-inches tall and was "morbidly obese," Scott admitted, weighing close to 300 pounds. He had tried numerous diets, but they either didn't work, or he was unable to keep the weight off.

He consulted with his physician, Dr. Gillespie, who recommended he be examined by an internist for an opinion. Dr. Donald Waltemath conducted that examination, Scott said, and found that Towle was "basically in pretty good health" except for his obesity.

However, Scott stressed, at no time did Dr. Gillespie consult with Dr. Waltemath about the operation.

Dr. Gillespie's attorney, William Lamson, later told the jury that the decision to have a bypass operation is the patient's and not the doctor's. Lamson also is from Omaha.

Towle had the surgery on June 12, 1974, at St. Elizabeth hospital, Scott said. On the morning of June 16, a Sunday, he complained of pains in his abdomen and Dr. Gillespie ordered another X-ray.

Scott contended that Dr. Gillespie was negligent because he didn't look at the X-ray the same day. In fact, Scott said, a radiologist didn't read that crucial X-ray until the next morning — an hour after Towle had died.

The X-ray showed that Towle had a small hole in his abdomen. Material leaked through that hole. He developed peritonitis as a result, which along with other complications, caused his death, Scott said.

Scott also contended the hospital was negligent because nurses refused to call Dr. Gillespie when Towle asked them to on that Sunday night.

Scott told the jury that if Dr. Gillespie had looked at the X-ray and operated to close the hole, "there would have been a high probability he would have lived. But they did nothing and he died."

Scott's rendition of the case was challenged by both Dr. Gillespie's attorney and the hospital's attorney.

Lamson said testimony will show neither the hospital, nor the physician were negligent.

The pains Towle experienced were normal since, after such an operation in which several feet of the small intestine are cut out, a patient is expected to get diarrhea and have gas pains.

On June 16 both Dr. Gillespie and Dr. Alan Langvardt examined Towle. Originally, Dr. Langvardt was named in the lawsuit, but charges against him have been dropped.

Lamson stressed that Dr. Gillespie ordered a chest X-ray, not an abdominal one, as a routine measure.

The doctors didn't expect the X-ray to be taken immediately, Lamson said, nor did they expect a radiologist to read the X-ray until the next day. It wasn't until 6 a.m. June 17 that Towle's condition deteriorated, he claimed.

No one could have prevented Towle's death, he said, and pointed out that Towle's wife, Norman Jean, a registered nurse, was at her husband's side and "she couldn't prevent it either," he said.

Fred Kauffman, attorney for the hospital, contended St. Elizabeth's wasn't at fault either. Although Towle asked the nurses to call his doctor, it wasn't because he was feeling worse, Kauffman said.

Instead, Towle was upset over the loss of a gold crown from a tooth during the surgery and wanted to talk to Dr. Gillespie about replacing it, Kauffman quoted the nurses as saying. At that time "there was no medical reason for him to come to the hospital," Kauffman contended.

Testimony in the trial before District Judge William Blue will begin Wednesday morning. Lincoln attorney Herbert Friedman also is representing Mrs. Towle in the case.

New BN track opens

Plattsmouth (AP) — A simple solution to an engineering problem in the 1800s turned out to be a later headache for modern Burlington Northern freights.

The problem was a stately bluff in the route of the then-Burlington and Missouri River Railroad tracks that were forming a steel ribbon for rail transportation across Nebraska. The tracks were laid around the bluff but the hairpin curve for the bypass had forced engineers of today's powerful locomotives to slow to about 10 miles an hour.

In 1974, Burlington Northern decided to move the bluff — all one million cubic yards of it — and on Tuesday, a locomotive burst through a paper billboard and public officials drove a golden spike to signal completion of the project.

On hand to drive the spike were Rep.-elect John J. Cavanaugh and State Sen. John Savage.

Fire response time at issue

Lincoln contractor Marlyn Schwartz said Tuesday night he is critical only of one phase of the firefighters' handling of a fire Monday which nearly destroyed his six townhouses under construction.

Schwartz criticized the fire department for the time it took to start pumping water onto the blaze, at 2900 S. 59th St. He said it took between ten and 15 minutes to get the hoses hooked up. By that time, he said, "we lost most of the buildings."

Reports of his criticism have been somewhat misinterpreted, Schwartz said.

Schwartz also said he has registered a complaint with the Lincoln Police Department's Internal Affairs Division against the actions of a police officer at the scene.

Schwartz claimed the officer prevented his son from telling firemen about the fire.

Fire Chief Dallas Johnson said the first fire rig arrived on the scene within four minutes after receiving the alarm and the second unit was right behind the first one.

Concerning the fire, Johnson said, "I don't think we had a sporting chance" because fire walls hadn't been constructed. Johnson also said the fire originally started at 10 or 11 a.m. Apparently, workers thought they had extinguished that blaze.

It wasn't until 1:26 p.m. that the fire department was called after someone smelled smoke.

NCLU gives priority to restitution

United Press International

A spokesman for the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union said Tuesday that organization is more interested in having criminals pay for damages than establish a citizen crime insurance program.

Ms. Barbara Gaither of the NCLU said both restitution and a state program to compensate victims of crime are desirable.

"But we would have to place higher priority on restitution," she said during a public hearing on possible legislation in those two areas conducted by the Unicameral's Judiciary Committee.

Ms. Gaither said the NCLU is especially interested in a restitution program that would provide an alternative, such as halfway houses, to prisons and jails.

She said it would be cheaper and allow the criminal a chance to work off his monetary debts. She also said that studies indicate alternatives to incarceration tend to cut down the likelihood that a person will serve time and then commit another crime.

Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff, a committee member, said he felt restitution was important as was state-provided insurance for crime victims because in a sense a crime creates public debt.

He also suggested people would not have to literally carry firearms to protect themselves against crime.

Judge Ben Novickoff of the Workmen Compensation Court appeared before the committee and volunteered his services in figuring out a reimbursement schedule for state assistance to crime victims. He said a schedule "would not be that difficult to comprehend" and put together.

The Unicameral, during this year's session, directed the Judiciary Committee to study the situation and come up with new legislation during the 1977 session. Two bills were introduced this year, but lawmakers deferred action pending additional information.

Farmland, Far-Mar-Co tie main topic

Kansas City (AP) — Directors of Farmland Industries, Inc., and Far-Mar-Co voted to merge the two big farm cooperatives, and the proposal will be a major concern at Farmland's annual convention starting Wednesday.

Farmland, based in Kansas City, is a manufacturing and wholesaling cooperative made up of 2,300 local farm cooperatives in 15 Midwest states from the Gulf of Mexico to the Canadian border and from Illinois to Colorado.

Far-Mar-Co, based at Hutchinson, Kan., is a grain-marketing co-op made up of 600 locals concentrated in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Colorado. All but 25 of Far-Mar-Co's members also are members of Farmland.

The directors approved the merger proposal at board meetings Monday. The governing vote will come when Far-Mar-Co holds its annual meeting in Denver Feb. 10-11.

Ernest T. Lindsey, president of Farmland, will report on the merger negotiations in his message to the opening sessions of the annual convention Wednesday morning.

George Voth, executive vice president of Far-Mar-Co, will be a convention speaker Thursday afternoon.

At Friday morning's business session, voting delegates representing the Farmland locals will get a formal report on the merger discussions and will be asked to indicate whether their co-ops are for or against it.

Discussions between executives of the two groups began in June. Far-Mar-Co would become a wholly owned subsidiary and the grain-marketing division of Farmland.

Farmland's annual report showed sales of $1.8 billion in the year ended Aug. 31. The addition of Far-Mar-Co's sales probably would boost the figure to at least $3 billion and put Farmland among the nation's top 100 corporations.

A record 18,000 co-op members and guests are expected for the Farmland convention. Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, will be among the speakers Thursday afternoon.

Juniata bank charter proposed

A decision will be made by Jan. 1 on an application to charter the Juniata State Bank, according to William H. Riley, director of the State Banking and Finance Department.

"There were no objections or no protests" to the charter proposal in a hearing Tuesday on the application, he said.

Proposed capital is $500,000. Stockholders are Randal Boesen and DeWayne Boesen, both of Kenesaw; Larry Boesen and Edwin Burnham, both of Stapleton; Douglas Clarke of Hastings; Richard Mousel of Ayr; Dennis Burr, Julius Dempewolf and Darrel Stromer, all of Juniata.

Juniata has no bank now. Riley said it takes about 30 days to complete the hearing transcript; so final action on the charter cannot be taken until the end of the year.

Man arrested for burglary

Rick J. Crosby, 20, 225 S. 23rd St., was arraigned in Lancaster County Court Tuesday for burglary after he allegedly was apprehended by police in a neighboring apartment building.

Resources advisers to review water plan

The Nebraska Natural Resources Commission policy advisory committee will meet in Lincoln Dec. 8 to review and act on a tentative work plan to improve water quality.

The project is being carried out under auspices and funding of a federal law. The session will begin at 9 a.m. in the Clayton House Motel, 10th and O.

The NRC said the staff will review the work plan, and report on comments received, work proposals submitted and priorities established by river basin policy groups. The commission will request comments from technicians as well as the public.

The state policy advisory committee will either change and approve the work plan or establish another review period.

Asst. Police Chief Roger LaPage said a neighbor called police after hearing noises in the next apartment, at 223 S. 23rd St. Police arrived and Crosby was arrested in the apartment, LaPage said.

County Judge Jeffere Chevront fixed bond at $1,000 and will set a preliminary hearing date on Dec. 7.

John and Meredith Dietl, Clara and Fritz Albers, and Marg and Joe Schoenberg "on board" in Maui.

Train tour began Maui jaunt

By Virgil Parker
Kaanapali, Maui, Hawaii — The first thing three Lincoln-area couples did after flying here for a week of vacation in this Pacific Paradise and a chance to see the Nebraska Cornhuskers play a football game, was to take a train ride.

"It was a great way to immediately get acquainted with this island and some history about Hawaii," said Marge Schoenberg, who lives in Elmwood with her husband Joe. They own a store in Lincoln's Rathbone Village.

The Schoenbergs were accompanied on the narrow gauge railroad ride through the sugar cane fields by John and Meredith Dietl of Nebraska and Fritz and Clara Albers from Elmwood.

The steam-powered engine left the Kaanapali resort beach hotel area and took a half hour to reach the nearest town — the ancient whaling port of Lahaina.

The native Hawaiian conductor came through to collect the tickets, gave a running commentary as the train rumbled through the countryside and occasionally pulled out his ukelele to sing a few songs.

The Big Red fans aboard learned that a short 16 years ago the island of Maui was covered with sugar cane fields and had few inhabitants. Now, there are over 68,000 residents on this small island, which is a booming tourist attraction.

The facts about how the sugar cane is harvested were particularly interesting the Dietls said.

The sugar cane takes 18-24 months to grow to a harvesting height of 10-15 feet. Then the field is burned to get rid of the dry leaves, leaving the stalks — which won't burn since they're loaded with sweet water.

"That one farm up the hillside to your left," our conductor informed, "uses 200 million gallons of water a day. It takes a ton of water to produce one pound of sugar."

When the cane is ready to harvest, they just stop the flow of water, which dries out the leaves for burning.

The harbor at Lahaina once accommodated as many as 520 whaling ships at a time.

"The whales are still here but the ships are gone," the guide said. "The whales spend the winter in this area. Most of them won't arrive for another month."

As the train went through a grove of coconut trees, the Nebraskans were told that the trees begin to bear fruit after five to seven years. "And we have trees on the island still bearing coconuts which are 140 years old." The life-style of the area is very casual. Once at the Lahaina train station, the Big Red fans were met by a bus which took them to the center of the village.

"The bus driver was a woman," Meredith Dietl said. "She said she hoped we didn't mind, but it would take just a few extra minutes for her to go by her home to check and make sure her young son was home from school."

"The house was quite modest," Mrs. Dietl said, "yet she told us she had to pay $375 a month rent. And she was going to have to move because the owner was going to raise the rent some more. The house was valued at $40,000 a year ago and is worth $70,000 now. Inflation is really terrible."

But the prices in the curio shops, for deep sea fishing excursions, golfing and other pleasures to pass the leisure time aren't out of line.

"There is just one thing we didn't like about our first day here," Meredith, Marge and Clara echoed as they boarded the train for the return trip to their hotel, "we just didn't have enough time to do as much shopping as we wanted."

The train whistle blew. The three husbands just smiled.

State vacation guide applications are sought

Nebraskans interested in employment as vacation guides during the 1977 tourist season should submit their applications to the State Department of Economic Development's division of travel and tourism by Feb. 1, 1977.

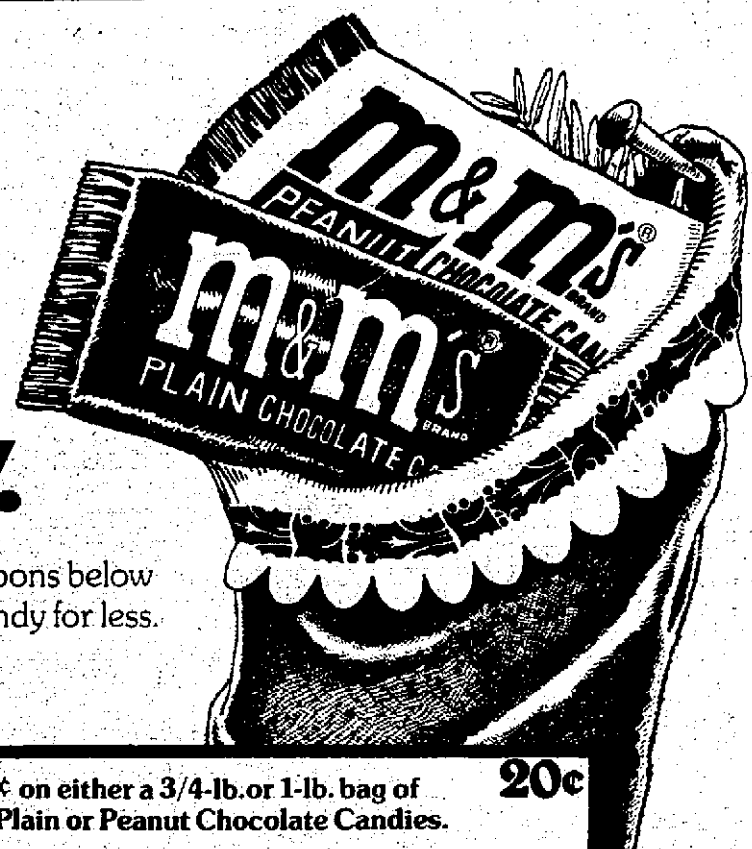

The vacation guide program primarily employs Nebraska college and university students, but all applicants having completed high school by the end of May 1977 will be considered for the full-time summer positions, according to Tom Fricke, chairman of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Conventions Committee.

Fricke said the division plans to hire about 44 guides statewide to work from June 1 through Aug. 13 at information centers.

North Platte Canteen to be television topic

North Platte (AP) — The North Platte Canteen, a volunteer service which originated during World War II, will be the subject of a national broadcast to appear sometime in January.

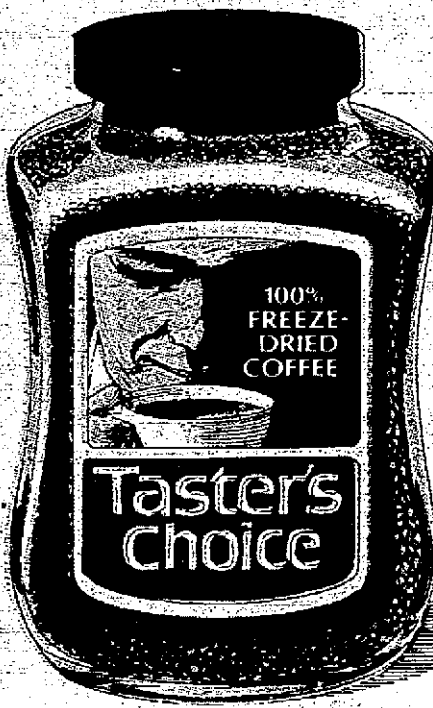

"On the road with Charles Kuralt" stopped in North Platte Tuesday to film a segment about the canteen which provided hot milk, cake, and entertainment for about 7 million enlisted men passing through North Platte on troop trains during its 44 years of operation.

Kuralt, 42, said the segment will be aired sometime in January as part of a new CBS-TV program entitled "Who's Who."

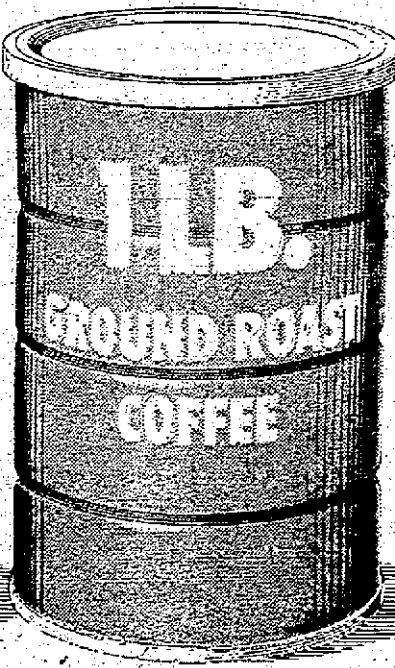

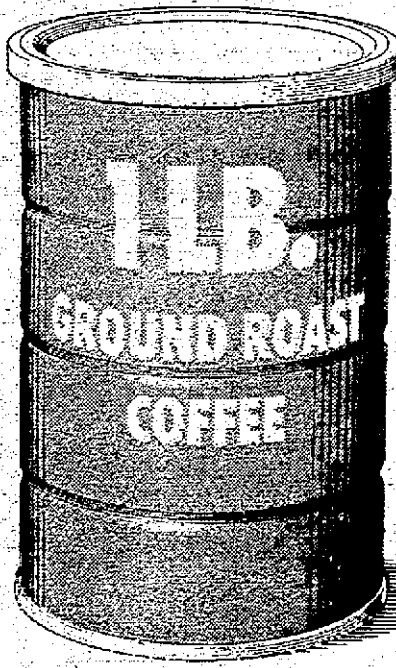

canteen through a letter written by a woman from Nantucket, Mass.

"She and her husband were traveling across the country in the '40s," he said. "They had gone 3 days on the train without a hot meal — not even a cup of coffee. When they stopped in North Platte, they were greeted with a feast."

The canteen, began Dec. 25, 1931, when a group of North Platte women met the troop train to bring food, candy and cheer to the men who couldn't go home for the holidays. The canteen grew out of that welcome as volunteers began to meet every troop train stopping in North Platte until April, 1946.

A half-pound of ours makes as much as two pounds of theirs.

An 8-oz. jar of Taster's Choice® Freeze-Dried Coffee makes 120 (6-oz.) cups of coffee. That's as much coffee as you'd get from two pounds of ground roast (following recommended serving directions of the leading national brands).

And since you make Taster's Choice by the cup, you never end up throwing half a pot down the drain.

So the next time you're comparing who gives you what for your money, remember: It's not how much it costs a pound. It's how little it costs a cup.

Green trial delayed after opening

Omaha (AP) — The murder trial of Jimmy Green, accused of holding three hostages at knifepoint in a neighborhood tavern in August, opened Tuesday in district court.

Judge Donald Hamilton continued the trial after opening testimony to give the defense time to arrange testimony by a psychiatrist.

Green, 31, a former Oklahoma high school football standout, is accused of killing Nathan Culbertson after he became angered when one hostage escaped during the 17-hour ordeal in Whitcomb's Halfway Tavern.

Phyllis Utnage, the hostage who was pulled away by police when she emerged to pick up some guns at Green's request, testified that Green told of being chased by "syndicate" crime members and that his behavior was erratic.

She said he kept the three hostages separated and that he was sometimes calm, sometimes highly agitated, and either threatened the trio with a knife or played with it.

Rosemary Akiens, bearing throat scars that police reports indicated were from Green's attack as police burst in the tavern door, said Green told the hostages "if he was gonna we was gonna die."

Ronald Frank, public defender representing Green, introduced evidence that Green claimed to hear voices on the tavern roof and from the walls.

He is expected to introduce psychiatric reports concluding that Green suffered from an extreme mental disorder and was paranoid when he committed the crime.

Judge Hamilton did not set a date for resumption of the trial.

Klan chief faces kidnaping, sex assault charges

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Court Judge Samuel V. Cooper Monday ordered Robert E. Lauritsen to stand trial in District Court on charges of kidnaping and sexually assaulting a 14-year-old girl.

The judge also ordered that Lauritsen remain free on a 10%, $35,000 bond.

The alleged victim, now 15, testified she and her boyfriend accompanied Lauritsen to his home to look at a dog Lauritsen said he wanted her to train.

The girl originally told deputy sheriffs she and her boyfriend were married.

The girl testified they went to near Valley and, after a stop to visit an acquaintance of Lauritsen, the defendant turned in to a field instead of returning to Omaha.

She said Lauritsen held her and ordered her boyfriend away at gunpoint, then forced her to have sexual relations with him. The girl testified she resisted but Lauritsen threatened to hurt her.

Her boyfriend called deputy sheriffs.

Lauritsen told reporters he is the imperial wizard of a Ku Klux Klan organization he formed last summer and headquartered in Omaha.

2 more deaths added to toll

Associated Press
Nebraska's 1976 traffic toll stood at 352 Tuesday after the death of a Sargent man near his hometown and the report of an Iowa killed during the weekend.

Authorities said Oscar Swick, 55, died Monday in a mishap on a county road about seven miles west of Sargent.

It was also reported that a pedestrian, C.W. Ellledge, 51, Carter Lake, Iowa, died Saturday when he was struck on U.S. 30 about two miles west of Schuyler.

There were 346 traffic deaths this time last year.

Two Omahans found shot fatally in Florida

Miami (AP) — A young Nebraska couple has been found shot to death in a dimly lit corner of an underground parking garage at the Coconut Grove Hotel here.

Police said the bodies of Charles Hartley, 28, and his wife, Nancy Helen Hartley, of Omaha, were discovered by a hotel employee Monday. They were sprawled in the front seat of their recently-purchased car, and had been dead since late Friday, police said.

Police said they were shot in the head. They theorized the killer was in the back seat and may have been a hitchhiker.

Their bodies were found by a hotel employee who usually parked in the space where the Hartley car was parked.

Although the killing took place at the Coconut Grove Hotel, police said the couple was registered at a motel outside the Coconut Grove area.

Investigators said they had not determined why the couple was in Florida. They said they had purchased their car in August in Omaha, Neb., but listed a Council Bluffs, Iowa, address and registered the car in Mrs. Hartley's name.

Exon seeks, gets ag ideas

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Gov. J. James Exon told the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association convention Tuesday that he expects to "have some input in President-elect Jimmy Carter's farm programs" and asked the feeders for their suggestions.

Exon did get input from the feeders, but much of it didn't match his suggestions for a farm program.

"Don't get us entangled in any grain reserve. We had 20 years of that which didn't work," said Mel Kuska of Fairmont. Kuska admitted that some kind of acreage cutback would be needed, but suggested it "is a long range program problem that won't be solved by a grain reserve."

Exon said that programs aimed at providing farmers with an income at 100% of parity with city incomes hadn't worked well in the past. "We need a price program of some kind, however, that is close to the cost of production of at least the more efficient farmers," he said.

John Klosterman of David City told the governor "The control of inflation is important. Most of our problems stem from the embargo on grain last year that sent our customers scurrying around the world for a dependable supply of food."

"The biggest problem we have is the tight control that organized labor has on the government," Klosterman said.

Exon agreed, but warned that "blaming labor for your problems isn't going to solve them." "We can't out vote them. We have to face facts. You need to talk to labor, offer constructive suggestions as to how to solve problems. Attacking labor is well received by farm audiences but it won't solve your problems," Exon warned.

Exon called for an emergency farm program in the early weeks of the Carter administration aimed at solving agriculture's more pressing problems.

Exon cited a need for improved target prices and loan rates with a possibility of a grain reserve that is somehow isolated from the market place. "It has to be isolated or it will end up being used to depress prices as soon as they start to rise," he warned.

Exon repeated his suggestion that some kind of a board be established to control food prices and supplies in the same manner that the Federal Reserve Board controls the nation's banking industry.

"The bankers are prospering in spite of the controls the board exercises," he said.

The livestock feeders also got a look at the political scene in Washington, D.C., from Bill Jones, a lobbyist for the organization.

"Both parties are sitting on the edge of their chairs waiting to see what the Carter people are going to come up with. Nobody really knows what their programs will be," Jones said.

Jones said he was proud to be a lobbyist for the farm group. "We are a pressure group that has a constituency. When government stops responding to the needs of people, we might as well live in Russia," he said.

Jones said there were three methods of exercising power by lobbies in Washington. "The labor lobby uses fear. They tell the congressman they will pour money into the campaign of his opponent in the next election. It is an effective method," Jones said.

"Business uses money for entertainment and influence in an effort to buy its vote. This too sometimes works," he said.

"Farm organizations use a different method. We don't have much money and our supporters wouldn't stand for buying a vote anyway. We use the cards, letters, phone calls and personal visits to Congress. When it is properly used the system still works well," he said.

Jones cited the cooperation of the National Livestock Feeders Association, the American National Cattlemen's Association and the American Farm Bureau along with the Independent Bankers Association in getting legislation passed to protect cattle feeders who sell cattle to bankrupt meat packers.

"We called on every single congressman and every senator. The bill passed with ease once we had the problems worked out," he said.

Jones warned the farmers to talk with their tax experts to study needed changes in their estate planning due to changes in the new federal tax law. "There may be some things you will want to change in your plans before Jan. 1," he suggested.

Jones also warned the feeders that signing a payment agreement with a packer could endanger their rights to cash in the event a packer did go broke. "Don't sign anything that changes the payment requirement or you may forfeit your right to the money because the signed statement has the effect of extending credit to the packer," he warned.

The three-day convention of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association will wind up Wednesday evening following the election of officers and the adoption of resolutions to govern the organization in the coming year.

Virgil Johnson elected by crop science group

Houston, Tex. (UPI) — Dr. Virgil A. Johnson, a well-known Nebraska wheat breeder, Tuesday was named president-elect of the Crop Science Society of America.

Johnson's election was announced at a noon luncheon during the group's annual meeting here.

Johnson, a native of Newman Grove, Neb., is a supervisory research agronomist with the U.S. Agriculture Department's Agricultural Research Service and a professor of agronomy at the University of Nebraska.

He is best known for his wheat variety development work and for his efforts to improve the nutritional quality of wheat and to develop international cooperation for the improvement of wheat.

Virgil Johnson
... president-elect

Johnson is the co-developer of 18 improved hard red winter wheat varieties that are planted on about one-fourth of all U.S. wheat acreage.

Metric conversion assistance offered

Associated Press

Nebraska Agriculture Director Glen Krescher has announced the availability of the Department of Agriculture to assist "individuals and organizations in preparing for the metric system."

Krescher said the agency's Division of Weights and Measures has personnel who know the metric system and upon request will present a brief program " geared to helping people prepare for the upcoming conversion."

Noting that the conversion will be strictly voluntary, Krescher commented that "we are going metric every day," as private industry continues to convert products to the metric system.

Panel to talk weed control

The Legislature's Agriculture and Environment Committee will meet in executive session at 9:30 a.m., Dec. 9, in the Omaha Hilton Hotel.

Balford Sen. Loren Schmitt, chairman, said there will be a panel discussion at 10:30 a.m. with members of the North Central Weed Control Conference.

State Digest

Hearing continued

Omaha (AP) — A final probate hearing on the $2 million estate of a Bassett man has been continued until Dec. 16 in Rock County court. Thomas L. Theisen, Los Angeles, claims he is the illegitimate son of the late Joseph C. Theisen and should be declared an heir to the estate.

Span completed

Grand Island (UPI) — Construction of a $79,000 bridge over Plum Creek, the first contract on the O'Neill irrigation project in north central Nebraska, has been completed on the Norden Dam access road, John Mayne, a U.S. Bureau of Reclamation spokesman, said. The access road is from Johnston to the Norden Dam site on the Niobrara River.

Omaha worker killed

Council Bluffs, Iowa (UPI) — Charles Bluff, 43, of Omaha was killed Tuesday in an accident at the construction site of the new Pot-tawattamia County courthouse. Authorities said Szolek was aiding a crane operator when the equipment apparently came in contact with an overhead electrical line. Szolek, who was holding onto the crane's cable at the time, was pronounced dead at a Council Bluffs hospital from the electrical shock.

White selected

Oakland — Neil White of Tekamah was chosen president of the Burt County Agricultural Society at the group's meeting here to succeed the late Bernard LeMaster. Other officers include Fred Fager of Oakland, vice president, and Orrin Kohlmeier of Craig, secretary-treasurer.

Shipping mark set

Kansas City (AP) — A.T. Settles, head of navigation and maintenance for the Army Corps of Engineers, said that shipping of goods on the Missouri River has set a new record this year. Settles said 2,828,327 tons of goods had been shipped on the river by Nov. 15, surpassing the old record of 2,810,000 tons set in 1971. Settles said despite the recent cold weather the shipping season is expected to run through early December.

Final clinic planned

Omaha (AP) — The final public clinic offering swine virus flu shots in Omaha will not administer them to anyone under age 18, according to Dr. H.J. Wegenew, acting director of the Omaha Douglas County Health Department. Ak-Sar-Ben will be the site for the final public clinic Sunday from 2 to 6 p.m.

Utility rate hike eyed

Hastings (UPI) — Hastings residents face a 25% increase in their water and sewer rates. The Hastings Utilities Board approved the rate increase for both services, but the new rates will not go into effect until approved by the City Council. The recommended increase is the first for water rates since 1971.

Sunflower crops said profitable

Alliance (AP) — The possibilities of raising sunflowers in Box Butte County were discussed Monday night before about 125 persons, some of whom appeared to go along with the idea.

Virgil Hashman, an implement dealer, said he had talked to persons associated with a sunflower dealer in South Dakota and learned that farmers would receive a higher net return on sunflowers than on any crop they cultivate.

He said he figured that farmers using irrigation could net $300 an acre. Dryland farmers could expect $150 per acre, he added. He said the cost of raising these crops would be less than for corn, sugar beets or wheat.

The sunflowers to be raised are not the confectionary kind, rather they produce the oil base used in corn oil.

Hashman said 85% of the sunflowers raised in this country are exported, but they are becoming a big market item.

Only five other states raise sunflowers. North Dakota and Minnesota grow the most.

Hashman said more states aren't raising sunflowers because as a cash crop they are relatively new in this country. The plant has been raised for only 10 years and the weather in some areas is not conducive to growing them.

An estimated 3,000 to 7,000 acres will be set aside in Box Butte County for raising the crop next summer.

This area would be the first in the state to raise sunflowers in a large amount and Hashman said he hoped the crop will spread to other parts of Nebraska.

McCollister advocates farm-business alliance

Associated Press

John Y. McCollister wants to counterpunch organized labor with a small business-agriculture combination and believes the Nebraska GOP needs a hierarchy housecleaning.

The three-term Republican congressman from Omaha, who lost Nov. 2 in his bid for the U.S. Senate, wants to form a regional coalition of business and agriculture interests in nine states to counter labor's influence in the Democratic party and government.

"The Democratic party is run by organized labor," McCollister said. "The Republican party doesn't have any similar association of interests to turn to."

The politicking and lobbying force McCollister envisions would be operated out of Omaha and push conservative principles in Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas. The man who lost his Senate bid to Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky said that he wasn't bitter. He said his call for a GOP state party housecleaning wasn't meant as criticism of the current controlling forces.

"I want to underscore that I am in no way criticizing these people," he said, referring to GOP state Chairman Anne Batchelder, Vice Chairman Don Steen, National Committeeman William Morrow, and Committeewoman Patricia Smith.

"Bill Morrow ran my campaigns for Congress and did a superlative job," McCollister said. "But I've told him and Anne we ought to have new faces all around."

One was the "terrible image problems" faced by the GOP.

Another was Zorinsky's successful effort to link the congressman closely with retiring GOP Sen. Roman Hruska, who supported McCollister, by calling the Republican Roman Hruska Jr.

A third was the decision by McCollister and his staff to spend more campaign effort outstate than on Lincoln and Omaha, where it was assumed the congressman was better known.

"I misjudged that," he said. "It was my mistake. I should have done a lot more campaigning in Omaha and Lincoln."

Tax chief Peters will ask for ceiling on tax spending

United Press International

State Tax Commissioner William Peters has promised the Unicameral's Revenue Committee that he will ask for new limits on spending by counties, cities, school districts and all other property-taxing authorities in Nebraska.

During an appearance before the committee Tuesday, Peters said the proposed legislation would put at least a one-year ceiling on budget increases after reappraisal of property in the counties. He did not suggest a figure during his appearance.

Peters said an escape clause will put larger spending increases up to a vote of the people. The clause is "essential to get it through the legislature," he said.

A limitation is necessary, he said, because assessors and county boards are catching the blame when taxes increase after reappraisals. He cited Gosper County, where valuations doubled, and tax bills rose 32%.

Peters stressed that higher assessed valuations are not the cause of higher taxes. The problem, he said, is that spending authorities increased their budgets "under the cover of the new valuations."

"Even though mill levies normally are reduced after reappraisals, the decreased rates usually produce more revenue. A county that cuts its levy on a property valuation that has been doubled has, in effect, raised taxes

By delaying spending increases at least one year, Peters said, dissatisfaction with higher tax bills would be shifted to the budget process instead of reappraisals.

Peters said the furor aroused by Gosper County's reappraisal has caused many other counties to begin dragging their feet on new valuations which were to go into effect in 1978.

He mentioned several other areas in which he will seek new legislation. He said he wants greater regulation of the $6 million bingo industry. There are problems in the conduct of the games, he said, as well as a lack of criminal penalties for illegal activities.

A federal court ruling has deprived Thurston and Knox Counties of part of their tax base by exempting reservation land from taxation. They may need some subsidy, Peters suggested.

Property tax information should be more confidential, Peters said, since computerization of tax statements has created a gold mine for salesmen seeking mailing lists.

He said, however, that the statements still must be made available to members of the public who are protesting their tax bills by comparing their taxes with those of their neighbors.

17-year-old youth arrested for rape

A 17-year-old youth out on probation for a sexual assault charge was arrested Tuesday for allegedly raping a Lincoln woman who is a deaf-mute. Asst. Police Chief Roger LaPage said the teenager was arrested about noon Tuesday for raping the woman sometime between 8 a.m. and 5 a.m. Tuesday at her home. The woman ran next door to a neighbor, wrote a note and asked the neighbor to call the police. The woman used a sign language interpreter to tell police about the assault and to describe the man responsible. LaPage said the 17-year-old youth is expected to be arraigned in Lancaster County Court Wednesday on the sexual assault charge.

State said stalling on state home plan

Omaha (UPI) — The plaintiffs in the Beatrice State Home case Tuesday asked U.S. District Judge Albert G. Schatz to allow them and the federal government to develop a plan to implement provisions of an agreement ironed out with the State of Nebraska more than a year ago. Without action by Schatz in favor of the plaintiffs, their attorney, Bures G. Mason, Omaha, argued the agreement "takes on an aura of an Alice in Wonderland proceeding — with accusations and counter-accusations having faith in a blizzard of motions and responses to motions." The federal government, the plaintiff-intervenor in the case, has been harshly critical of Nebraska's particularly Gov. J.J. Exon's, alleged failure to implement the plan agreed upon last August and has asked Schatz to reopen the case. The state and Exon have denied any wrongdoing in the matter, but court observers felt with Mason's motion late Tuesday, Schatz would, in fact, reopen the case. The settlement provided for recognizing the constitutional rights of mentally retarded citizens; placing a substantial number of Beatrice State Home residents in community mental retardation centers; and a panel to implement the settlement, particularly the reduction of the home's population in an orderly fashion. Mason, however, contended if such an implementation plan does exist, "It is not the one contemplated by the settlement agreement" and the state has failed to notify him of the contents of such a "plan." Mason filed the suit in 1972 in behalf of five children at the home, contending their constitutional rights were being violated. Mason said he had "no desire to prolong this litigation, but the simple fact remains that the terms of the consent decree are not being met." Whether or not Nebraska is attempting to "extrapolate measures to meet the agreement," Mason said, "all parties need guidance from the court to eliminate the confusion surrounding the present status of the agreement." Mason said the plan of implementing the settlement was a "crucial element" of the agreement and since no plan exists he proposed the plaintiffs and the federal government assume the state's responsibility in jointly preparing such a plan. "Such as request is certainly not novel," Mason said. "In deed this practice is well established as a practical aid to decision making." Should Schatz approve the plaintiffs' proposal, Mason urged the judge to appoint an "impartial expert witness" to aid the court in evaluating progress towards implementing the joint plan. Such an expert, Mason said, would be of "valuable assistance."

"The principles of cooperation, compromise and trust implicit in the settlement agreement need to be preserved," the attorney emphasized. Under the original settlement, the implementation panel and Schatz were to supervise the reduction of the Beatrice State Home's population over a three-year period. Mason told Schatz such a panel which is "essential to the operation of the settlement agreement is non-functional." The agreement also called for a halt to new construction at the Beatrice State Home, but Mason said capital construction, in apparent violation of the agreement, "is about to commence again."

Exon calls for inquiry into prison homosexual activity

Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday he ordered an inquiry into reported "possible increased homosexual activity among some inmates at the State Reformatory" in Lincoln. Exon said he received reports Monday which indicated "possibly one or two young inmates, at least, had been involved with other inmates" and "homosexual rape" was also cited as a possibility. The governor ordered State Patrol investigators to the reformatory on Monday night. In cooperation with panel officials, they obtained statements "that are being referred to proper prosecuting officials," Exon said in a prepared statement. Exon said he furnished Correctional Services Director Joe Vitak with information that was provided the governor. He directed Vitak

December statements cut in half

The new motor vehicle registration law that took effect last January means that only about half as many Lancaster County residents will be receiving motor vehicle tax statements by the end of this year as did last December. Under the new registration law, Nebraska re-registers their autos on the anniversary of the date they first bought license plates. All Nebraska registration renewals and motor vehicle tax payments had to be in by January or February under the old law.

"Though Nebraska Gov. J. James Exon took a bit of token action," State Sen. Ernest Chambers said, the Nebraska National Guard mock hanging incident "is far from adequately resolved."

Exon last week fired Maj. Gen. Francis Winner, the state adjutant general, and said he'll review with Winner's replacement any possible further action regarding personnel involved.

"The handling of this incident to date indicates that America, rather than the land of the FREE and the home of the BRAVE, is more accurately the land of the TREE and the home of the SLAVE," Chambers said.

The Omaha senator made the statement in a letter to Gen. LaVern Weber, chief of the National Guard Bureau in Washington. Chambers sent a copy of his own report on the "lynching" at Ft. Gordon, Ga., last May 31.

Nebraska Guardsmen, a black private, was the mock hanging victim of Mississippians during the Lincoln unit's annual training.

Chambers said his own report "is more detailed than those of the governors of Nebraska and Mississippi." He said, "Mississippi's response is a terrible commentary on the lack of honor and ethics in the National Guard."

Gov. Cliff Finch of Mississippi wrote Exon that the mock hanging was an unfortunate prank and promised it wouldn't happen again. Exon, when he released Finch and Winner's reports, also lauded Finch's response, particularly in view of a Mississippi lieutenant's alleged lack of command during the incident.

"When such a deplorable act can be done, and it is the subject of laughter and jest by National Guard officials, the Bureau should take a position of honesty and frankly inform black people that they have no rights which the Guard is bound to respect," Chambers wrote Gen. Weber.

Chambers has accused the Nebraska National Guard of covering up the "attempted murder." Exon himself didn't learn of the mock hanging until mid-October, but he concluded there was neither premeditated criminal activity nor a coverup.

"These inadequate responses are why I have maintained that only federal action can bring the matter to a satisfactory and just conclusion," Chambers wrote. "Though the Bureau does not prosecute, if, during its investigation, it uncovers violations of federal law, the Bureau has an obligation to refer the matter to the Justice Department."

"Certainly the deliberate falsification of official documents for the purpose of deceiving a federal agency (by Nebraska Guard officers) is a violation of federal law. Certainly actions taken in concert to obstruct the administration of justice is a violation of federal law," Chambers said.

Exon too found that documents were falsified. Overall, he cited his limited authority because no Nebraska laws were broken but referred his reports to officials in Georgia and other jurisdictions for possible prosecution.

Chambers wrote Weber he'll send the general his critique of Exon's investigation and report, plus comments about Finch's.

Livestock association picks queen

M. J. Hankins of Stanton was presented the distinguished service award by the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association at the organization's annual banquet Tuesday.

Hankins, a 1931 graduate of the University of Nebraska has served agriculture as a vocational agriculture instructor, as a soil conservation specialist and was a founder of the Stanton County Livestock Feeders Association.

Kerry Beth King, 20, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith King of Kearney, was crowned 1977 Nebraska Feeders Queen. Representing the Ft. Kearney Livestock Feeders Association, she is a junior home extension major at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Runners up among the nineteen queen candidates were: Dixie Richards, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Richards of Exeter; and Julie Dean Larsen, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Larsen, of Hooper.

Carter's victory challenged in three states

Associated Press

Jimmy Carter's Nov. 2 victory at the polls is being legally challenged in three states with a total of 77 electoral votes.

At stake in the court challenges are votes in New York, Ohio and Milwaukee. In the national election the Democratic president-elect secured 297 electoral votes to 241 for President Gerald Ford.

"The election has actually been stolen — the actual winner was probably Jerry Ford," said Paul Greenberg, regional coordinator of the U.S. Labor party, spearheading an

The Labor party also is a plaintiff in New York and Ohio and an attorney in New York argues Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn:

"Where an election is so tainted as to be a farce, that election should be overturned."

Teaming with the Labor party in Wisconsin is the American Independent party. They have carried their charges of widespread fraud to the state supreme court after their request for a recount in Milwaukee county was turned down in a lower court.

Independent party president William VanDyke criticized a new Wisconsin law which allowed voters to register at the polls on election day, saying: "It's easier to vote than to check out a book from the library in this state."

In Ohio, the Labor party was joined by the American party and the Republican party in a suit that asked that certification of Carter's 9,383 vote victory be enjoined, that present electors be barred from casting the state's 25 electoral votes, and that the Nov. 2 election be voided and a new one held under supervision of the U.S. District court. Again, the charge was "widespread fraud."

In New York, a request for an injunction was brought by the labor party and its co-plaintiffs were the Rockland county Republican party and several individual Ford supporters. They challenged the election in which Carter won the state's 41 electoral votes with $280,000 ballot margin.

They seek a full scale hearing on their request for an injunction overturning election.

Camp named judge

Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert R. Camp said Tuesday he sees his appointment to the Lancaster County judge vacancy as a challenge. Camp was appointed to succeed retiring County Judge Ralph Slocum by Gov. J. James Exon effective Jan. 5.

Camp said he is pleased with his selection but added it would be premature for him to make any statements regarding his plans once in office.

Exon chose Camp from among three candidates. The other men being considered were attorneys Raymond Calkins and Jack Lindner, both of Lincoln.

Camp, 47, 2531 S. 36th St., has been legal counsel to the Nebraska Liquor Commission since 1961. He also has served on the Lancaster County Mental Health Board. He graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Law in 1955. Camp will join Judge Jeffre Chevront on the county bench.

Exon appoints district judges

Gov. J. James Exon announced Tuesday his selections of three men to fill judicial vacancies.

Curtis H. Evans, Seward County attorney, will replace County Court Judge Joseph Hranac in the 5th Judicial District. Evans was chosen over attorney Randy Stoll of David City, whose name the nominating commission also certified.

In Norfolk, Judge Eugene C. McFadden will replace Judge George W. Dittrick in the 9th District Court. James J. Duggan, Norfolk attorney, was also certified for consideration for the bench. Scotts Bluff County Atty. Robert O.

Hippe of Scottsbluff was named to replace Judge Ted R. Feidler in the 17th District Court. Two other Scottsbluff men were considered, attorney Robert M. Harris and Judge James L. Macken.

Retirement for the trio of judges is effective Jan. 5.

3 candidates for judge nominated

The judicial nominating commission for the 9th District county court has submitted three nominations to Gov. J. James Exon to succeed retiring Judge Joseph F. Hunker.

Nominating Commission Chairman Harry A. Spencer, Supreme Court justice, said the nominees are: Stephen P. Finn, 41, of Neligh; Philip R. Riley, 37, of Creighton; and Steven J. Shaw, 34, of Norfolk.

Spencer said the trio were recommended from among six candidates. A seventh, Joseph J. McNally, withdrew his application before the public hearing.

Gage, Jefferson district judge nominees chosen

By Dean Terrill

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — An 18th District judicial nominating commission went for youth in selecting three nominees Tuesday afternoon from which a new county judge will be chosen for Gage and Jefferson counties.

Required to submit at least two choices for the governor's final selection, the non-partisan group named the three youngest attorneys from among six applicants. They are Steven B. Timm, 31, and Paul Korslund, 37, of Beatrice, and James P. McKernan, 33, of Fairbury.

Supreme Court Justice Paul White announced the nominees following a 75-minute executive session of the eight-member commission, comprised of attorneys and laymen from the two counties. The applicants had just made presentations at a public hearing in the Gage County District Courtroom.

The other candidates were Oscar (Bo) Clarke, 59, recently moved to Beatrice from Lincoln; Kenneth Mahlin, 60, who lives in Fairbury but practices in Beatrice; and Robert Lammers, 40, of Fairbury.

All three of the nominees are Democrats although chairman White noted that "There was no discussion of politics whatsoever" during the executive session. Mahlin is the only Republican among the six.

All three of the nominees currently hold public office. Timm is Gage deputy county attorney, Korslund is Beatrice city attorney and McKernan, Jefferson County attorney.

Timm and Korslund are graduates of the University of Nebraska Law College. McKernan of Creighton Law School.

The man named by Exon will succeed Judge Dennis Winkle, who was voted out of office at the Nov. 2 election.

Restaurant's Sunday plans not yet final

The Boar's Head Restaurant has not decided whether to open on Sundays if a city ordinance allows Sunday liquor to be served in Lincoln. A story in Monday's Star indicated the restaurant would open, but Boar's Head manager Lou Emick said a final decision would have to be made by the restaurant's owner, Food-maker Inc., a division of Ralston-Purina.

Parents voice concerns in final school session

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The last group of Lincoln parents had their chance to tell the Lincoln Board of Education what's wrong (and right) with the schools Tuesday night.

Representatives of the parent groups of 18 schools met the board in the commons area of Dawes School and expressed concerns about: lack of counselors; inaccessibility of summer school for some students; a shortage of school nurses; a lack of sufficient physical education on the elementary level; cold classrooms and programs for the gifted.

At least one school concentrated its entire presentation on a specific issue. Mrs. Vincent Haller, representing the Havelock School parents group, complained about the Havelock Extended Learning Program (HELP), an alternative junior high school, which has been located in the elementary school building.

"We would like to know the total cost and the per pupil cost of the HELP program which involves only seven students, but requires six full-time teachers and one part-time principal," she said.

"Although we don't deny these students equal opportunity for an education, we are concerned that they must be constantly supervised while our 200 regular elementary students must get by with a part-time principal," she added.

She further said the parents are concerned that the elementary students not have any contact with the HELP students, and that "something be done before somebody gets hurt."

Following the presentations by all groups, Superintendent John Prash responded to the Havelock concerns saying "We think you are overly concerned, but we will continue to monitor the situation lest you prove us wrong."

Prash said the use of the Havelock site for the program was not a result "of any hidden agenda for the school," but rather an attempt to "utilize buildings that would, otherwise, be under-utilized."

Counseling concerns came from the Dawes groups (elementary and junior high) who said that present student-counselor ratios are so overwhelming that many times a student doesn't know he has a counselor.

Several groups expressed a desire to have summer school programs held on a neighborhood basis, keeping them in schools that are closer to students' homes so that they won't have to be bussed across town to take advantage of them.

Representatives of Pershing School parents noted the lack of nursing volunteers to staff the nurse's office for half days on days when the nurse is not in the school. Several other schools asked for more nurses, and one group suggested the use of a pre-signed consent form by parents in case emergency medical attention is necessary for their children when the parents can't be contacted.

Mrs. Lee Zentic, of the Meadow Lane parents group, asked the board to consider phys. ed. for grades K-3, with a decreased emphasis on the upper elementary grades. This, she said, was recommended by a school consultant.

Cold classroom complaints varied from one school which has several classrooms on the "back side" of the building that don't get any sunshine, to another which has adjoining rooms with temperature variance of 20 degrees.

Prash told the parents he's getting a little tired of "taking the heat and being the bad guy" for the school's energy conservation program which started several years ago. He noted that energy savings had been substantial in the past, and had enabled the schools to meet the increasing utility costs "head on."

Lincoln schools have been on their own oil systems since last weekend's cold snap required the interruption of natural gas service, he added.

Associate Superintendent for instruction Ron Brandt answered a specific question about "What is the gifted program?", saying, "They are experiences that are right for them (gifted students) as an individual."

Brandt admitted that the schools are probably going about the program the hard way — trying to integrate gifted programs into the regular classroom work of each student rather than saying "You go off to that room," — but added he was concerned that controversy with the program often "shows up in the newspapers."

Brandt also said that talk of "a return to the basics" was something else the media had popularized.

"Schools are very fad prone, but we have never steered away from the basics in Lincoln," he said. "Reading, writing and math are still high priorities in our schools."

Lower grades find problem shared

Lincoln police nab Denver suspect

While recovering a $300 television set stolen in Lincoln Tuesday, Lincoln police may have helped solve an armed robbery in Denver.

The television set, which was reported missing by Norman Turner, 140 N. 11th, was located Tuesday afternoon in a local pawnshop. In tracing the pawn ticket, police arrested two men in connection with the burglary, one of whom was wanted by authorities in Denver for armed robbery.

A third suspect in the burglary was apprehended Tuesday evening by Omaha police, after receiving a tip that he had traveled there today by bus.

The three men were being held Tuesday night awaiting charges.

Old, discarded phone books can be recycled to save the cutting of many living, growing trees. Just drop your 1976 directories in any Salvation Army drop box or take them to any Red Shield Store by December 15, 1976. Locations are listed below. ## Beame campaign payoff investigated

(c) New York Times
New York — A prominent real-estate developer was promised a lucrative building project in exchange for secret contributions to the 1973 mayoral campaign of Abraham D. Beame, according to sources close to the participants in the scheme.

These persons said the deal was arranged in the month before the election at a meeting attended by Bernard W. Beame, the mayor's son and campaign manager; Irving Goldman, a close friend of the mayor, and the developer, Christopher Boomis.

At the meeting, Boomis was promised help in obtaining a choice housing project as a payoff for cash contributions to the campaign "laundered" through two dummy foreign corporations.

The matter is now under investigation by District Atty. Robert M. Morgenthau.

The sources said they had no information that the mayor himself had been aware of the transaction.

Boomis, reached Monday at the home of a relative, would not discuss details of his campaign contributions because the matter was under investigation. But when the deal as described by other sources was outlined to him, he said: "I don't know where you got them, but there's nothing wrong with your facts."

Goldman declined, through his attorney, to discuss the matter, and Bernard Beame denied participating in the deal. Morgenthau refused to discuss his investigation.

The persons who told of the deal said that the two foreign corporations to which Boomis had made out the checks were controlled by Arnold E. Kagan, a builder and financier who contributed $10,000 to the 1973 Beame campaign.

Goldman, Boomis, Bernard Beame and Kagan are all under investigation by Morgenthau.

DuPont ups fiber prices

(c) New York Times
New York — E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. announced Tuesday that it was increasing the price of the manmade fibers it produces by as much as 10%, effective Jan. 1.
It was the third announcement this week of a price increase for a major industrial product and followed increases on both steel and aluminum.
Manmade fibers, including DuPont's well-known "Dacron" polyester, are used in a variety of products, including apparel, home furnishings and carpets. The market for such fibers has been weak in recent months, and the industry has been plagued with overcapacity.
Meanwhile, in Washington, the recent spate of price increases was characterized as a "serious blow" by Arthur M. Okun, who served as a presidential adviser in the last Democratic administration. However, Alan Greenspan, chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, took a more benign view.
DuPont gave no reason for its move but noted that "this is the first price increase in DuPont polyester staple in over a year." Industry observers were quick to point out that the industry is in the doldrums at present.
A check of major competitors elected only the standard "we're studying it" reaction from such giants as the Allied Chemical Corp., the Beacraft Corp., the Celanese Corp. and Eastman Chemical Products Inc.
Meanwhile, the Reynolds Metals Co. announced that it was following the move initiated Monday by the world's largest aluminum producer, the Aluminum Company of America, in raising its prices for rigid aluminum container sheet used in the production of beer and soft drink cans, effective with orders received Tuesday and with shipments of Jan. 3.

Alcoa raised its prices by as much as 11.2%, or 6 cents a pound, on the aluminum body stock used for beer and carbonated beverage cans.
A spokesman for the Continental Group, the world's largest packaging manufacturer, said the company was "most concerned about this increase because it will clearly have to be reflected in the price of cans to our customers."
Its major competitor, the American Can Co., described Alcoa's pricing move as "substantially higher than anticipated, though we recognize that their costs are rising." The spokesman added:
"We believe that the price situation will settle out through the competitive forces of steel versus aluminum. We note that Reynolds's prices are lower than Alcoa's. That factor, combined with the competition presented by steel, we believe will tend to drive prices down."
The aluminum products involved in the increases represent the largest packaging use for aluminum. The latest industry statistics, covering 1975, showed that containers and packaging accounted for 19% steel price increase Nov. 24 by the National Steel Corp. and the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. was followed by similar moves Monday by the United States Steel Corp., the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the Republic Steel Corp., the industry's top three.

White-collar criminal gets prison term

Boulder, Colo. (UPI) — A judge who believes white collar crimes should be punished just as severely as any other criminal acts has sentenced a restaurant manager to up to four years in prison on a fraud charge.
District Judge Rex Scott imposed the sentence on Charles Nash, 46, even though a defense attorney warned it would be difficult for a man of Nash's age and emotional makeup to serve time in prison.

Nash is the designer and manager of the Old Stone Church, a restaurant at Castle Rock. "He's a con artist," Scott said. "He has a prior record, and he's a very poor risk for probation. I think it's high time judges started sentencing people for white-collar crimes as well as for breaking into houses. They're both stealing."
Scott pleaded guilty to fraud in the sale of mountain property, which he did not own, to a young couple.

Deputy District Atty. Mel Tatsumi said Nash also printed up some "nice-looking calendars" that said on the back all proceeds would go to the National Foundation for the Blind. "But the National Foundation for the Blind never heard of him," Tatsumi said.
The prosecutor said Nash also has two convictions in Nebraska for selling cars that did not belong to him and owes various people "about $80,000."

Copper firm cuts price

New York (AP) — Asarco Inc., one of the nation's largest copper miners and refiners, said Tuesday it is cutting its selling prices for domestically-produced copper by five cents a pound. The cut, effective Wednesday, lowers Asarco's prices for various types of copper to 65 cents a pound. Copper prices had soared to as high as 74 cents a pound early this summer but began to fall rapidly. One industry source said a possible reason for the drop was that "speculation in futures contracts just didn't hold."

Executives sentenced for rigging box prices

Chicago (AP) — Forty-seven executives of cardboard box manufacturers were given jail terms and fines Tuesday for rigging the prices in the folding carton industry.
The toughest punishment was 60 days in jail and a $35,000 fine for R. Harper Brown, president of Container Corp. of America, one of the nation's largest firms with annual sales in the $1 billion range.
Brown was among 16 defendants sentenced to jail terms by U.S. District Judge James Parsons, who declared that the cost of price fixing "is passed along to the ultimate consumer."
Defendants with shorter sentences, some with four or five days, will be able to serve them in work-release programs, allowing them to go to their jobs during working hours.
Parsons said he will hold hearings throughout December, including Christmas week, on any motions for reduction of sentences.
Parsons said before the sentencing that the folding cartons manufactured by the defendants were used for products ranging from frozen foods to camera film.

"Because of this kind of price accommodation, the manufacturer of each pays more for cartons than he would if there were clean competition between the producers," he said. "Presumably, this additional cost is passed along to the ultimate consumer."
The indictment specifically charged the defendants with a conspiracy to violate the Sherman Antitrust Act. Earlier, 22 other corporations executives also pleaded no contest and were found guilty. Another executive also pleaded no contest; his sentencing was set for Dec. 10.
One corporation, Consolidated Packaging of Chicago, and two executives, Vern Kepford, general manager for national sales of the Polatch Corp. of San Francisco, and Melvin Riecke, a vice president of Consolidated Packaging, pleaded innocent and are awaiting trial.
The case involved most of the large and medium-sized companies in the industry.

Pillen, Miller, Dokes lead All-Big Eight football team

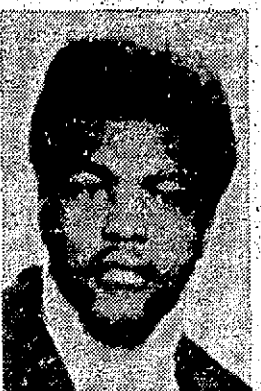

Terry Miller

Vince Ferragamo

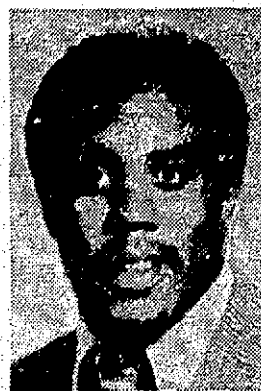

Clete Pillen

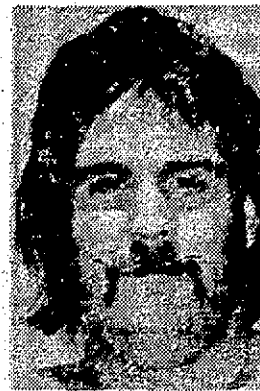

Ray Phillips

Dave Butterfield

Mike Fultz

Bob Lingenfelter

Dan Schmidt

Kansas City (AP) — The top vote-getters on the 1976 Associated Press All Big Eight football team are a running back who amassed the second-highest rushing total in conference history and blocked like a bowling ball.

A linebacker who was supposed to be too small for major college football but led his team in tackles two straight years.

And a defensive tackle who in his senior year finally achieved the greatness that had been predicted since high school.

Terry Miller of Oklahoma State, Clete Pillen of Nebraska and Phillip Dokes, Miller's Cowboy teammate, led the way in all ballots received from a panel of sports writers and sportscasters who regularly cover the Big Eight.

The explosive Miller, more than anyone else, sparked Oklahoma State to its first piece of the Big Eight championship in history.

Linebacker-tough, he led the conference in rushing, scoring and all-purpose running while the Cowboys tied for the title with Oklahoma and Colorado and won an invitation to the Tangerine Bowl.

Joining him in the backfield of elite are Nebraska quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who led the conference the entire year in passing and total offense, and Tony Reed, Colorado running back whose 1,210 rushing yards were second only to Miller's 1,541.

The only junior besides Miller on the offensive unit is Missouri's Joe Stewart, the league's top pass catcher, who teams with Luther Blue of Iowa State at wide receiver.

Derrel Goforth, who moved around in the Oklahoma State offensive line from center to guard to tackle and helped blast the way for Miller's vintage year, settles at center for the all-conference team.

He is flanked by guards Dan Schmidt of Nebraska and Dave Greenwood of Iowa State, perhaps the most consistent offensive linemen in the league. The tackles, two of the most mountainous young men in college football, are Oklahoma's Mike Vaughan, 6-5, 275, and Nebraska's Bob Lingenfelter, 6-7, 277.

Oklahoma State's Abby Daigle was named placekicker and, in nothing of a surprise, Cliff Parsley of Oklahoma State is the punter. Parsley finished this season with a 43.7-yard average per boot, leading the league in his specialty for the fourth straight year.

Pillen, Nebraska's 6-0, 206-pound linebacker is one of the most famous mistakes the Cornhusker coaching staff ever made. Told by recruiters to give up his dream of playing for the Big Red because he was too small, he enrolled on the Lincoln campus anyway and beat the odds, winning a scholarship his sophomore year.

The other linebacking spot went to Daryl Hunt, Oklahoma's quick, rangy 6-4, 215-pound sophomore who anchored the Sooner secondary and led the Big Eight in tackles.

Nebraska's Mike Fultz, 6-5, 275-pound senior at defensive tackle.

In a close battle, Colorado's Charlie Johnson was named middle guard. Told by Buff coaches to shed some of his 300 pounds, the 6-2 senior trimmed down to a svelte 267 and, with drastically improved quickness, terrorized enemy ballhandlers.

The defensive ends, Nebraska senior Ray Phillips and Daria Butler, Oklahoma State junior, typify what Colorado Coach Bill Mallory once termed the "lean and mean" type that conference coaches were inclined toward. Phillips is 6-4, 222, and Butler 6-3, 202.

The defensive secondary is a gang of headhunters, led by a pair of Oklahomaans, senior Scott Hill, 5-11, 192, and Zac Henderson, 6-1, 180. Dave Butterfield of Nebraska, 5-10, 182, and another senior, Mike Spivey of Colorado, 6-0, 196, round out the defense.

Two of the greatest players in the Big Eight and the nation were not eligible for all-conference consideration because they played only six games. Oklahoma defensive back Jerry Anderson and Nolan Cromwell, Kansas' great wishbone quarterback, suffered season-ending injuries in the same game. They were named honorable mention.

Miller, who finished fourth in this year's Heisman Trophy balloting, should be a strong contender for the award next season. He set a school record with 19 touchdowns and 114 points and averaged more than six yards each time he touched the ball. In all-purpose running the 6-foot, 190-pound terror amassed 1,633 yards.

Ferragamo led the Big Eight in passing and total offense from the season's opening kickoff. With one regular season game remaining, the firearmed senior has passed for 1,958 yards and 18 touchdowns.

OU loss is tough on Osborne, staff

Sports Signals

By Virgil Parker

Hawaii more than a scrimmage, Huskers

Kaanapali, Maui, Hawaii — Before Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne faces the task of getting his Cornhuskers "up" for the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl game against Texas Tech, and thus prevent another Arizona State Flaco Bowl affair of a year ago, he needs to get his charges to think a little about this Saturday's game in Hawaii.

That might be a tough chore. The University of Hawaii has won just one game all season. That was a forfeit. The University of Portland coach got so upset over the hometown officiating he took his club off the field with about six minutes left in the game while trailing by three points.

I'm sure the word has leaked to Lincoln by now that Oregon State swamped the Rainbows last Saturday night, 50-0.

Only second win for Beavers

Oregon State had managed just one victory all season prior to that game. The Beavers lost to Kansas, Kentucky, LSU, Syracuse, Washington State and Oregon, among others.

Osborne faces the job of convincing his club that this Saturday's game will be anything more than a "scrimmage."

The reason we use that word is because it comes from a column in the Honolulu paper by veteran sports writer Dan McGuire.

McGuire recalls the Nebraska-Hawaii game in Lincoln, Sept. 17, 1955.

"The year before, the Cornhuskers had come to Honolulu and clobbered the Rainbows, 50-0," McGuire recalls.

Then he turns the story over to Hank Vancoscellos, who coached Hawaii in those days.

"Nebraska gave us a $25,000 guarantee and we took just 20 players on the trip," Hank told McGuire. "The day before the game, the Lincoln newspaper termed the game a 'scrimmage.'"

"After dinner that night," the ex-coach added, "I called a team meeting. I showed the players the $25,000 check and said it was a long way to travel for a scrimmage and that we were out-weighted 40 pounds per man and underdogs by 40 points."

"I told them that if they believed in our defense — a shaman front — we would hold our own. They asked me to leave the room and that's what I had hoped for."

"The first half was 0-0 and we never got past the 10," Vancoscellos says. "But, in the third quarter we stopped Nebraska on our three-yard line. Then we took the ball and marched for the only score of the game. Seven of our boys played the full 60 minutes."

McGuire concluded his column by saying, "When Hank told me the story, I kept waiting for him to tell me that he took the 40 points the bookies were offering, but the entire $25,000 and made a fortune for the University."

Second worst defeat

The Honolulu paper reported that the Oregon State victory was the second-worst defeat in University of Hawaii history, topped only by a 75-0 rout by College of Pacific under Eddie LeBaron in 1959.

While Oregon State had everybody but the water boy in the game in the second half, the before-intermission state told the story.

— Oregon State had 342 yards in total offense to 48 for Hawaii.

— OSU had 13 first downs, UI, 3.

— OSU was 7-0 in passing, UI, 1-4.

— Hawaii converted third down plays into first downs once in eight tries, while OSU was 4-for-8.

Oregon State led, 31-0, at halftime.

Hawaii coach Larry Price — some Lincolnite is sure to make a joke about the fact that he must have a bunch of "hamburgers" playing for him — observes that "Nebraska is ten times better than Oregon State, but I think we'll play better against them. When you get blown away like we did against Oregon State, it's a maturing process — something you don't forget in a hurry."

Now, Osborne has to convince his club that Hawaii represents more than a "scrimmage" opponent.

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Friday's mindbending 20-17 loss to Oklahoma wasn't the only difficult task Tom Osborne was forced to wrestle with that cold and dreary afternoon.

Trying to unwind in the quiet solitude of his home, Osborne was startled when his children burst threw the door with the news that they had heard a national television announcer say their dad might be fired.

Announcer Dave Diles, who was handling the halftime scoreboard show on ABC-TV's telecast of the Pittsburgh-Penn State game, suggested the loss to Oklahoma might cost Osborne his coaching job at Nebraska.

"My kids were watching the game downstairs and heard I might be fired," Osborne recalled Tuesday morning in his office. "I don't know if they were really upset about it, but they wanted to know if it was a fact. I'm sure it had an effect on them."

Having his children subjected to such news is only part of the personal hell Osborne has been going through since the loss to the Sooners.

The mail has been heavy and the phone calls abundant.

"Frankly," Osborne said, "I took the phone off the hook at home for the weekend. The kids took some calls after the game and most of them were not supportive. I don't think the kids should have to hear some of the things that were said."

Osborne knows there has been some adverse mail, questioning his coaching ability and his job status. But he seldom sees derogatory correspondence.

"The first year I used to look at all my mail and sometimes it was depressing," Osborne said. "But my secretaries go through the mail now. I don't look at any of the unsigned ones."

"But I've received a lot of supportive letters which I try to answer."

Nasty letters and crank phone calls are a part of the job and Osborne knows it. "My wife and I both understood what I was getting into when I took this job," Osborne said.

The Cornhusker coach said his wife, Nancy, has been very helpful during the rough moments.

"It would be very difficult to handle the job if I didn't have a wife like her," Osborne said.

"I know some coaches' wives can't even go to the games and they get ulcers. But Nancy is very strong and philosophical. She really seems to have a handle on things and that helps."

Has pressure from the fans and some bad press ever caused Osborne to consider resigning?

"Sure, I've thought about resigning," Osborne admitted. "I've always weighed the pluses and minuses and sometimes it's a pretty thin line between the two."

Obviously, the pluses have so far prevailed for Osborne, who is in his fourth year as head coach of the Huskers.

"I really enjoy football," he explained. "It's a great game. I enjoy working with the players and coaches and respect the sacrifices they make and admire their ability."

Calling the days since the Oklahoma game some of the toughest he's ever spent, Osborne said, "There has been a lot of soul searching going on in this office. No one feels any more disappointed than the coaching staff."

Has he ever worried about being fired?

"No," Osborne said. "Usually when a coach wins 75 to 80% of his games he doesn't have to worry about his job. But maybe that isn't enough here."

"But I've never received any feeling from any University official or the athletic department that they want to get rid of me. But if anyone felt that way, I'd be the last one to fight it."

The cutback on scholarships and coaching staff has made the business of college coaching a precarious one at best, according to Osborne.

"We felt like we had done a pretty good job of coaching last year when we won our first 10 games," he said. "Then we lost the last two and a lot of people felt like we had a losing season."

Osborne said he thought Nebraska probably had a slight edge over the other Big Eight teams prior to the season. He knew that if a couple of plays went the wrong way it would cause a lot of havoc. His worst fears along that line were realized last Friday.

"The Oklahoma game was a very emotional game and it's tough to live with yourself when you lose," Osborne said. "I've spent a lot of time thinking about that game since and the 20 or 30 different things we might have done to win."

Asked if he has thought a few years down the road about how long he might remain at Nebraska or if he might try pro coaching, Osborne said, "I really just go one year at a time. I just want to do the very best job I can here. Like any coach, I want to win them all. But that is getting to be a pretty tough thing to do."

Lincoln wrestling teams into action

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Lincoln teams haven't fared well in recent Nebraska state high school wrestling tournaments. But it's not because they don't plunge into the most competitive situations.

All five Lincoln schools will compete in large invitational meets this weekend to kick off their respective seasons.

Northeast draws the toughest assignment, participating in the 18-school Omaha North Invitational Thursday, Friday and Saturday at McMillan Junior High.

Sessions are set for 6 p.m. Thursday and Friday with Saturday's championship program beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Joining the Rockets in the rugged, mini-state meet competition are Council Bluffs AL, Omaha Benson, Omaha Bryan, Omaha Burke, Omaha Central, Council Bluffs Lewis Central, Creighton Prep, Omaha North, Omaha Northwest, Omaha Roscelli, Omaha South, Omaha Tech, Council Bluffs TJ, Omaha Westside, Schuyler, Omaha Ryan and Bellevue's JV's.

Lincoln East and Lincoln Southeast will compete in the eight-school Kearney Invitational Saturday, starting at 9:30 a.m. Consolation matches begin at 6 p.m. followed immediately by championship matches.

Columbus is favored in the Kearney competition. Hastings, Grand Island, Beatrice, North Platte and Kearney will also compete.

Harold Simpson, Lincoln High's first-year head coach, faces an equally tough challenge in his debut Saturday in the Fremont Invitational. Bellevue is favored to defend last year's Fremont championship. Halston, Papillion and Fremont are other title threats. Millard, Omaha Gross and Norfolk complete the eight-team lineup.

Competition starts at 10 a.m. with the finals scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

Simpson wrestled for Lincoln High in 1965. He started the wrestling program at Winmalee and has coached the past four seasons at Class C Hebron.

"I don't know how well we will compete because I don't know that much about Class A teams yet," Simpson says. "We have great enthusiasm. We should get a reading on where we stand very quickly at Fremont."

Lincoln Plus X joins the mecca for invitational competition this weekend, journeying to Auburn Saturday to compete in an eight-school meet.

The Thunderbolts will compete against Falls City, Nebraska City, Syracuse, Wymore Southern, Norris, Ashland, Seward and Auburn.

Competition starts at 10 a.m. with the finals slated for 8 p.m.

Coaches are reluctant to tab a preseason city favorite in wrestling. John McIntyre's Northeast team has won the city title the past three years, but he faces some rather major headaches in a bid to repeat.

"We don't even have a 90-pounder," McIntyre points out. "That's the first time I've ever had a blank in a weight class in 13 years here. I've been searching the hallways, but to no avail."

Dick Longoria, a 112-pound senior, compiled a 20-5 record for the Rockets last season, but did not place in the state meet.

One of the Rockets' top threats, 165-pound senior Rod Peterson, will not be eligible until second semester after transferring from Pennsylvania.

Transfer lettermen are abundant at other schools. East coach Jim Holechek has Bob Houser, a 133-pound transfer from Topeka, Kan.

Southeast coach Gall Baum has transfer lettermen David Oakley, a 124-pound sophomore from Slater, Mo., and heavyweight Felix White from Winnebago.

"We have kind of a mediocre team," Holechek says. "We'll have to wait and see at the end of the season. That's the only time people remember you, anyway."

Baum believes his Knights "have had a year of hard knocks. Now, we'll see if we can pull it all together and come through. We have a lot of returning people, but had a losing (2-7) record last year."

Plus X's team is built around 124-pounder Steve Reinach and 167-pounder Jim Warner, both of whom qualified for the state meet last year as juniors.

Basketball

Pro basketball star Marvin Barnes has been ordered to serve a one-year prison term after his Rhode Island probation was rescinded for an Oct. 9 Michigan arrest for illegal handgun possession.

The prosecution said Barnes' arrest at Detroit Metropolitan Airport broke a three-year probation term stemming from a 1972 assault case in which Barnes was convicted of assaulting a former Providence College teammate with a tire iron.

Airport security guards found an unloaded revolver in Barnes' luggage as he boarded a plane. Barnes contended the confiscated gun belonged to a girl friend who was traveling to St. Louis with him.

Football

Oklahoma University football coach Barry Switzer, fresh from a 20-17 win over Nebraska, has been named coach of the week by United Press International.

The federal government has filed suit against Dallas Cowboys defensive end Harvey Marting, claiming he failed to repay nearly $2,000 in student loans while a student at East Texas State University.

Texas Christian University has announced the appointment of F.A. Dry, who resigned as coach at the University of Tulsa one day earlier, as its new football coach.

The Mississippi State Supreme Court has rejected a request for early review of a ruling that allows Larry Gillard to play football for Mississippi State University despite NCAA sanctions against his eligibility.

Baseball

The Oakland A's have signed former St. Louis Cardinal manager Red Schoendienst to assist new A's manager Jack McKeon and coaches Lee Stange and Cal Ermer.

Sporting News has selected Joe Burke, general manager of the Kansas City Royals, as Major League Executive of the Year.

The New York Mets have signed 30-year-old right-handed relief pitcher Skip Lockwood to a three-year contract reported to be in excess of $200,000.

The New York Yankees, seeking right-handed hitting power, have acquired slugging outfielder Jim Wynn from the Atlanta Braves in a straight cash deal.

Probable lineups

Tipoff: Hilo Civic, Hilo Hawaii, (11:30 p.m., Lincoln time)

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Hilo, Hawaii — In past seasons, Nebraska's basketball team has occasionally played better on the road than in Lincoln.

That apparently has been the case this season. The Huskers opened the campaign in their Sports Center, losing to the University of Iowa, 71-87. Then, against a highly-regarded University of Washington team in Seattle, NU scored a stunning 59-58 overtime win Monday.

NU coach Joe Cipriano certainly hopes his road success continues here Wednesday night when his Huskers meet the Hilo College Vulcans in an 11:30 p.m. (Lincoln time) match at Hilo Civic.

While the Vulcans may not be a ranking NCAA power, they handled Brigham Young-Hawaii with ease last week. Hilo roared to 127-66 and 115-75 victories.

Nevertheless, with a team averaging 121 points, the fans are excited about coach Jim Yagi's crew. Hilo athletic director Ramon Goya expects a full house, the first one here in several seasons. Of course, the arena only seats 3,000 persons.

Cipriano, aware of Hilo's 17-11 record last year, knows he may have trouble.

"Hawaii-Hilo is a good NAIA basketball school with some talented players," he said. "Hicks (6-5 forward Gilbert) is not only a good scorer, he is good on the boards. If we can control him and Huffman (6-7 center Terry), our speed and quickness should be able to offset those two. However, they didn't win 17 games last year with just two men, so their depth must be pretty good, too."

The big scorer in the first two games for the hosts has been Jay Bartholomew, a 6-4 forward. He connected for 28 and 24 points against Brigham Young-Hawaii.

Team captain Hicks averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds per game a year ago. He paced the Vulcans to an impressive 88-points-a-game average. Admittedly, the Vulcans weren't competing against NCAA powers, but 88 points is still an achievement.

Huffman, a 6-7 senior center, averaged 8.4 points last season. He and Hicks are the only returning starters.

Yagi, who has compiled a 46-33 record in three years here, is anxious for the challenge of meeting Nebraska.

"We're doubly excited about playing Nebraska since they're a Division I school and we're in the NAIA. We're going to be a team-oriented squad without any individual star. We won't be real quick, but we'll make up for that with our talent," Yagi said.

This will be the first game between the two schools.

Nebraska meets the University of Hawaii Thursday and Friday nights in Blaisdell Center in Honolulu. Hawaii has lost two home games to Oregon State, 91-78 and 98-78.

Hilo Notes — The Vulcans, an independent team, have an attractive schedule. Just three of their 23 scheduled games are road contests.

To nobody's surprise it's Dorsett

New York AP — Before he ever played a game for the University of Pittsburgh, Tony Dorsett wanted to quit.

But, says Coach Johnny Majors, "he never backs away from a challenge."

Dorsett didn't back away from this one, either, and it paid off Tuesday when he won the Heisman Trophy as "the outstanding college football player in the United States."

It was a runaway for Dorsett, almost as easy as his romps through Pitt's 11 victims this year for an all-time NCAA record of 1,948 yards.

The 5-foot-11, 192-pound senior, son of an Alliquippa, Pa., steel mill worker, carried each of the country's five voting regions—East, South, Midwest, Southwest and Far West—and received 701 of 863 first-place votes, 112 seconds, and 30 thirds for a total of 2,357 points. Twenty voters left his name off their ballots. The voting is tabulated on a 3-2-1 basis.

Ricky Bell, Southern California's star running back, finished second in each region but polled only 1,346 points on 73 firsts, 485 seconds and 157 thirds. In third place was another running back, Michigan's Rob Lytle, with a total of 35-85-138—413.

"I guess this makes up for last year," said Dorsett, who thought he should have won the 1975 Heisman, but finished fourth. "Not too many people get an opportunity to win the Heisman Trophy. It only comes once in a lifetime, except for Archie Griffin."

But the Heisman Trophy, the single-season record of 1,948 yards, the NCAA career mark of 6,082, the all-time scoring total of 356 points—all could easily have been nothing more than a string of zeroes if Dorsett had had his way.

"I was sick and tired of football," Dorsett said. "The first time I wanted to quit was at a high school all-star camp for the Big 33 game in Pennsylvania. There were a lot of other things I could be doing instead of getting my body all banged up, but if I had I'd probably be just another person out on the concrete. The second time was after training camp my freshman year at Pitt. The transfer from high school to college really did it to me."

"I'm basically a quiet person. It was hard for me to even go out and make friends with my own teammates. I was ready to quit school. My mom told me if I quit it would have broken her heart, but the person I'd probably be hurting the most would be myself."

"She didn't really have to do too much talking to get me to go back and now I'm sure she was right."

Dorsett displays coveted award.

NU crowd has options

For Husker fans who didn't make the road trip to Hawaii there is a full slate of other NU athletic competition to choose from while waiting for Saturday night's football game against the University of Hawaii.

The Husker's women basketball team now 6-3, returns home from a third place finish in the Turkey Tournament in Springfield, Mo., to face Grand View College Thursday night at the Coliseum. Tip-off time is set for 7:30 p.m.

The women's swimming and diving team will host the Husker Invitational Relay Meet Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in the NU Sports Complex.

Teams from Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, the University of Kansas and the University of Nebraska-Omaha will compete against the Huskers.

Coach Judy Shalk's women's gymnastics team will travel to Brookings, S.D., Saturday to compete against South Dakota State and Bemidji State College.

The men's swimming team will also be on the road this weekend, competing at the Big 8 Swimming Relays at Missouri.

The wrestling team winds up a three-week road trip with the Iowa State Invitation, in Ames, Friday and Saturday.

Iowa State drops foe

Ames, Iowa AP — Steve Burgason and Carlton Evans combined for 30 points as Iowa State defeated St. Louis 62-47 in the season opener for the Cyclones and the ISU debut for Coach Lynn Nance.

Iowa State took a 10-point lead midway through the first period as the Cyclones' aggressive man-to-man defense stymied the Billikens. And the cold-shooting St. Louis — 35 per cent from the field — helped set the pace of the game.

Iowa State held a 32-24 halftime lead, but that dwindled to just four points midway through the second half.

But Evans, who had 11 of his 15 points in the second half, hit back-to-back field goals, and the Cyclones stretched their lead to 12 and then ran off eight unanswered points to put the game out of reach.

Missouri wins despite errors

Columbia, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's defending Big Eight basketball champions posted an 85-76 decision Tuesday night in anything but artistic style over South Dakota.

The Tigers finished with six players in double figures.

Doane clips Texas team

Abeline, Texas — A pair of freethrows with seven seconds left by junior guard Frank Hogan propelled Doane College to a 84-82 victory Tuesday night over Abeline Christian University.

Doane, which overcame a five-point halftime deficit, was led by senior Randy Wenz with 24 points. Wenz hit on 12 of 20 fieldgoal attempts.

Bluejays nip Drake

Des Moines (AP) — John C. Johnson cashed two free throws with 13 seconds to play Tuesday night, giving Creighton a 81-80 basketball victory over Drake.

Creighton, 2-0, led 79-70 with 1:41 to play when Drake pulled to within one point on a layup by Terry Benka with 29 seconds to play. Johnson was fouled 16 seconds later and made both free throws.

Reserve Raymond Watson, who scored nine points in the final five minutes to fire the Drake comeback, hit a basket with three seconds to play, but the winners didn't even bring the ball in bounds.

Robert Scrutens tallied a career-high 26 points, Rick Apke added 19 and Johnson 18 for Creighton, while Ken Harris led Drake with 26 and Napoleon Gathier added 13.

Drake, 0-2, shot only 38.6 percent, compared to 80.4 for Creighton, which won for the fourth straight time in the series and the second time in three years by a single point.

Escalera win brings boos

The split decision was booed loudly and long by a crowd of 16,019.

Off The Record by Ed Reed

Astrological Forecast by Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, December 1, 1976

My member is on your side and makes you happy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Obtain hint from Virgo message, surprise and unorthodox elements are featured. Keep guard up - do more listening than asserting. Be aware of contractual obligations, other legal matters. See in realistic light, not through prism of self-idealization. You'll understand!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Key now is organization, a focusing of priorities. Emotional commitment is in picture, combined with investments in your own capabilities. Older individual may disagree with you, but patience wins. You will "get your way!"

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish rather than begin - get feel of the circle. To live a life of your own, agree with you, but patience wins. You will "get your way!"

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You break loose from restriction, barriers to progress. You do have right to be independent. To live a life of your own, agree with you, but patience wins. You will "get your way!"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Short term prospects could be deceiving. Stress security - don't give up something of value for nothing. Cancer, Scorpio and Capricorn figure prominently. A relative emerging from conflict with young person, wants encouragement from you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money picture will be brighter - and this comes in surprising manner. Long-distance communication is involved - you receive news concerning publication, education, travel. What's a block to cash flow... is vigorously removed.

IF DECEMBER 1st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are frank, creative, original, independent, a traveler, a thinker and a philosopher. You also are hermetic, somewhat aloof, play the opposite sex, a bit selfish and determined to have your way because you feel it is the right way. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You will soon be embarking on a new adventure, fresh contacts, relief of burdens, a rare chance to succeed in areas that appeal, offer emotional and material "beats."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow through on hunch - heed inner feelings. Much that occurs could be hidden, behind scenes, "inspired" clients. Sagittarius, Cancer, Capricorn and Aquarius figure prominently. You could be offered a contract for task you took for granted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What seemed an ideal is now close enough to "touch." You revise some opinions. You become more flexible. Your "heart's desire" may turn out to be something very different than originally conceived.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to familiar ground. Bull solid base. Be thorough, practical, familiar with basic material. One who is impatient, destructive may try to enlist your aid. Protect your own interests. Return to any scheme which hears down with no plan for rebuilding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You want change and travel, but circumstances may upset plans. Always be ready for surprises, unusual requests, misquotes, garbled instructions. Key is to analyze, find the why of happenings, to take nothing for granted. Sagittarius, and Virgo persons are in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be a companion shopper. There are "clams" to relieve you of possessions, valuables, money. Know it and defend your own interests. Check rates, time and motion studies, luxury items, durability. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently. Family

There is a different message that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 2. The result is your key number. Insert it in the corresponding square of the message and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
